THE WAR IN MISSISSIPPI.

GEN. SHERMAN'S MOVEMENTS.

The Richmond Enquirer of Feb. 22, collects the following extracts from Southern journals, which show that SHERMAN frightened the rebels pretty effectually. It says:

"The accounts we get from Mobile are encouraging. The defences are said to be almost impregnable, with line after line of defences, with admirably constructed redoubts, all round the city. An officer of the army, who left Mobile on the 13th, represents everything quiet in the city, and not the least evidence of apprehension or alarm on the part of the citizens. No person of either sex or age had scarcely paid any attention to the notification of the Commanding-General, he little in the concern as to the boasted attack of the Yankees."

The Mobile Tribune, speaking of the removal of refugees of the enemy, says:

"Mr. J. D. RYAN, messenger of the Pioneer Express Company, reports that, from all that could be gathered from rumor at Meridian, the destination of the Yankees is undoubtedly Mobile. He saw a Federal cap that had been captured after the Yankees crossed Pearl River, with a red ribbon around it, on which the words 'Mobile or Hell' were printed in large letters."

The Register says:

"The enemy seems to have been found at last, and has turned up north of the Southern Road, near Decatur. This place is about thirty miles from Meridian. Report says the Yankees are taking it quite leisurely, not having the fear of Gen. POLK before their eyes, we suppose. We trust they will be taught a better appreciation of Gens. FORREST and LEE before they get through."

The Register adds:

"There has been no fighting of moment as yet, the Yank evidently desirous of avoiding a fight, but Lee and Forrest were heavy in the rear. They were marching rapidly, with their front and rear secured by their cavalry.

In their advance, the enemy divided their forces at or near Meridian. The main body deflecting to the right and taking the direction of Mobile, the other column bearing to the left, and pursuing the route of the retiring forces of Gen. POLK.

Gen. POLK, with Pettus's and Tarrant's Divisions, was west of Meridian, near the Chunkey River to dispute their progress, in that quarter, while a large force is being rapidly transported down the road to meet any thousand movements in the direction of Mobile."

For centre the Selma (Ala.) Reporter says:

"We are of opinion, from circumstances, that fighting has been going on for the last two days. An order was received here yesterday to prepare hospital accommodations for three hundred wounded. This proves that there has been fighting."

The Selma Dispatch says:

"Passengers by the Alabama and Mississippi train, last night, report fighting going on at Enterprise and near Meridian. These reports are not credited. Gen. POLK has very properly closed his lines for the present."

The Tribune, referring to the movements of the armies, says:

"Gen. LOZIER's Division had behaved most gallantly, and made the most rapid march during the war. It had reached Meridian, and was expected to be at Enterprise that morning by 10 o'clock. There was great excitement all along the road."

The Montgomery Mail, in speaking of the situation of affairs, says:

"Gen. POLK's troops were in line of battle Sunday at Chunkey River, twenty miles west of Meridian. The enemy were reported at Lake Station, about twenty-five miles further west. Up to yesterday Meridian was still in our possession, though all the stores had been removed. This embraces everything of a definite nature we can gather in the way of news from the Mississippi front."

A Government agent who was in Jackson when the enemy took possession, and came along with them nearly to Morton, gives the following information as to the strength and condition of their forces:

"The Yankee army are about thirty thousand strong, composed as follows: Two Sixteenth Army Corps, (SHERMAN's old corps,) and the Seventeenth and Nineteenth Army Corps, commanded respectively by Gens. MCPHERSON and HURLBUT. Most of these troops are from Gen. GRANT's army, and are their 'veteran' troops. They boast of a permanent occupation of the country, and propose, among other little jobs, to take Mobile and Selma. This modest hope is expressed in a style peculiar to the God-fearing and devout nation, by the words 'Mobile or Hell,' 'Selma or Hell.' They have only twenty days' rations of bread and no meat at all. Each brigade train marches in the centre of its brigade. The enemy have only fifteen hundred cavalry, and that the most worthless. He talked with many officers, and they all pronounced their cavalry worthless. They never venture more than one or two miles from the infantry, and scatter at once when our sharpshooters open upon them."

THE WAR IN GEORGIA.

THE RECONNOISSANCE TO DALTON.

DALTON, Friday, Feb. 26.

Yesterday, STEWART's and DAVIDSON's Divisions did the principal part of the fighting. BANKSHEAD's old division was partly engaged. The enemy were found everywhere, and fell back on our right. Some skirmishing along the centre to-day. The Yankees have made a demonstration, supported by an infantry division, intended to flank our left, occupied the gap three miles from Dalton, on the Tunnel Hill Road, last night. SMITH's Texas Brigade drove them out. This morning, by hospital record, our loss is reported in 191, including Col. OGRESS, of the Forty-first Georgia, and three Lieutenants—GUYTER, of the Fifth Confederate Cavalry; LINDSAY, of the Sixth North Carolina, Company A; NEADER, of the Thirty-fourth Georgia, Company K. Number of killed, eight or ten. The number of Yankees captured, all, including a Lieutenant-Colonel and one Surgeon, and eight of their wounded. The Yankee loss cannot yet be known, but much greater than ours. Our army is eager for a general engagement, and apprehensive that the enemy will retreat tonight.

DALTON, Saturday, Feb. 27.

All Thursday night the enemy were occupied in moving their dead and wounded. Their loss is heavy. They fell back yesterday two or three miles. This afternoon they are five miles beyond Tunnel Hill, WHEELER pursuing. They retook the citizens of Tunnel Hill, and burnt several houses. PATTON, ANDERSON and BATE have been appointed Major-Generals.

TUNNEL HILL VIA DALTON, Feb. 27.

The enemy passed through here last night at 12 o'clock, and will probably not make a stand this side of Chickamauga. One division of HOOKER's Corps had reached this place. Our Winter cables at Tunnel Hill were not destroyed by the Federals. Several unburned houses have been left upon the field. Our cavalry and skirmishers are advancing, but all signs of a general engagement have disappeared.

FIGHTING IN NORTHERN GEORGIA.

From the Richmond Examiner, Feb. 26.

The Government has received no official intelligence of the fighting in Northern Georgia, reported in the telegraphic columns; and the conclusion is that the whole affair was hardly more than heavy skirmishing. It is asserted that the enemy made the demonstration to determine the truth of the rumor that we had been weakened by detachments of his forces in the Southwest; and that the Yankees must begin to will satisfied in this regard that they have been badly retreat to Chickamauga.

GRANT'S MOVEMENTS.

From the Atlanta Appeal.

[illegible]

making such rapid advances to the very heart of our country. If the enemy cannot be checked by direct opposition to his advance, some countervailing movement should at once be inaugurated. There is no longer a doubt but that a column of troops have been sent from GRANT's army at Chattanooga to cooperate with the force of SHERMAN. Gen. LOGAN, it is stated, with one army corps, has already moved in that direction. What route he has taken, or will take, is as yet unknown to us.

RETREATED.

From the Rome (Ga.) Courier Feb. 27.

The Federal force, a division of infantry, under Gen. CORSE, and a brigade of cavalry, commanded by Gen. WILSON, that lately occupied Will's Valley, have all retired beyond the Tennessee River. They recrossed last Tuesday night, and have fortified on the north bank of the river, opposite Larkin's Ferry. Their pontoons had not been taken up on Wednesday. Our scouts now go to Larkin's Ferry, and also Guntersville.

THE WAR IN EAST TENNESSEE.

LONGSTREET'S MOVEMENT—CAPTURE OF YANKEES.

From the Richmond Examiner.

It is no longer disguised that LONGSTREET has fallen back to Greenville and Bull's Gap. It is reported that a portion of his forces crossed the river at Strawberry Plains on Saturday last, and were attacked on Sunday by the enemy, which drove our forces back. The pontoon bridges were cut loose to keep the enemy from pursuing. The report is that Longstreet fell back to prevent a flank movement. We may say, however, that the public need feel no anxiety as to this movement of Longstreet, as we are assured that the real object, which of course it would be imprudent to mention, is very far from being the occasion for any misgivings.

For a long time Longstreet's army has been an idle force in the Confederacy. When it fell back from Knoxville it went into Winter quarters near Morristown, where it has been in a state of isolation until recently. We do not know that the bridges have yet been repaired on the route to Morristown from Bristol, a distance of ninety miles, traversed by couriers and uncertain mail-carriers. The Holston has divided the two armies, which the enemy has now crossed. It is conjectured that the Yankees desire to occupy the country held by Longstreet, in order to subsist themselves during the Winter; but, on the other hand, it is very certain that Longstreet has not retired from the pressure of the enemy's forces, but for considerations entirely independent of them.

The following was received at the War Department yesterday from Gen. LONGSTREET:

GREENVILLE, Feb. 27, 1864.

To Gen. S. COOPER: Brig.-Gen. WM. E. JONES captured two hundred and fifty-six of the enemy, and fifteen negroes, near Wytna's Mill, five miles east of Cumberland Gap. They belonged to the Eleventh Tennessee (Federal) Regiment, under the command of Lieut.-Col. J. A. DAVIS, who was taken, wounded. Gen. JONES dismounted and attacked the enemy in front. Our loss was three killed and three wounded. The enemy had five killed and many wounded.

(Signed,) J. LONGSTREET, Lieut.-Gen. Comdg.

NEWS FROM LONGSTREET.

From the Bristol (Va.) Gazette, Feb. 25.

Something is the matter in front. LONGSTREET has fallen back to Greenville and Bull's Gap. It is reported that a portion of his force crossed at Strawberry Plains on Saturday last, and were attacked on Sunday by the enemy, which drove our forces back. The pontoon bridges were cut loose to keep the enemy from pursuing. The report is that LONGSTREET fell back to prevent a flank movement. We believe he fell back in order to better subsist his army, and for a more important reason, which we deem it imprudent to mention at this time.

THE WAR IN VIRGINIA.

FROM GEN. LEE'S ARMY.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Feb. 29.

A letter from the camp of the Twenty-third Virginia Regiment, dated Morison's Ford, Feb. 22, says: "All's quiet along our lines. MEADE has evinced no disposition to be hostile since his attempt at an advance on the 6th, which proved a failure, and at which time he undoubtedly found that the 'rebels' were not, as he had been reported by some lying Northern journal, in the inner ditches around Richmond. The army is now well clothed and shod, and in better health and spirits than since the war commenced. Every one seems perfectly satisfied with the action of Congress on the Currency, Tax and Military Bills. The Commissariat is doing as well as we have any right to expect. All are furnished with an abundance of good corn meat, moderate rations of bacon and beef, and frequently molasses, sugar and GENUINE coffee. The troops of this army, with but few exceptions, have reënlisted for the war. All of the Twenty-third Virginia, save some twenty odd, have signified their willingness to fight on till the last armed foe is driven from a soil they have so long polluted by their presence."

THE FOOD QUESTION.

THE RICHMOND MARKET.

From the Richmond Examiner, Feb. 29.

It may be safely asserted that this market was never so bare of provisions as it is at this time. The "currency act" has produced a sudden cessation of supplies, and as the stocks on hand were previously light, or nearly exhausted, the quantity for sale is wholly insufficient to meet the demands of commerce. The effect, therefore, is not only to maintain the extraordinary prices quoted in our last, but to give an upward tendency to the prices of various articles. On the other hand, the turning point in sugar, molasses, and various other articles, seems to have been reached. The condition of the provision market is not unexpected. The primary effect of the "currency act," in the country, was to cause a general bewilderment and uncertainty as to the future. The first impression was that it had so far discredited the existing currency as to render it altogether inexpedient to exchange commodities for it at any price. Hence the cessation of supplies. The "sober second thought" must be that, in view of the rapid extinguishment of the currency, by funding and taxation, it is expedient to sell, whilst present rates prevail. In a short time, the amount of money in circulation will be so materially reduced that there will be a positive scarcity of currency, and when that is the case, prices will come down. All farmers cannot afford, under such a state of things, to hold back supplies. Many of them will soon discover that they will make or save more by selling what they can at the present enormous prices, and putting the amount realized in Confederate four per cent. bonds, than they can by holding on to what they may have to spare until after the 1st of April, and then selling at reduced prices in exchange for an improved currency.

We omit our usual list of prices, simply remarking that everything in the shape of provisions commands the most exorbitant rates. If sellers are not satisfied with present prices, it is certain they never will.

Sugar has declined since our last report. At an auction sale yesterday, brown, in hogsheads, brought 20@21 c.; in barrels, 22 c. @23 c. Rio coffee sold at $112@112 50 per sack; 20c. @21c.; black pepper, $10 50; rice, 22c. @24 c.; sweet potatoes, $2 25 @ bu.; onions, $100 @ barrel.

Manufactured tobacco sold at lower rates—especially the medium grades. The prices of fine were better maintained.

Gold brought $2 50@$2 60 for one; sterling exchange, $2 25@$2 50; Confederate Treasury Notes, seven-thirties, $112 50 and interest—an advance; State Treasury Notes, $150 for $100—an advance. Coupons of North Carolina six and eight per cent. bonds, mixed, brought $152 50.

THE RESULT OF REBEL LEGISLATION.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Feb. 29.

On the publication of the Currency Bill passed by Congress, prices immediately "leaped up." Everything has an upward tendency. Yesterday, whisky which had been selling ten days ago for $60 per gallon, could not be bought at $120. Brown Sugar $12½ per pound by the hogshead, and none offering. Some of the dealers have absolutely shut up and refused to do business at all, preferring to hold on to the goods rather than receive anything in the shape of money larger than a $5 note.

All this is but the result of the sudden panic into which the country has been thrown by the unexpected repudiation of a portion of the currency. It is, however, the mere influx of the tide, and its rapidity will retard prices for their old standard. It seems to be pretty generally conceded by all parties that prices will fall, the currency be sound, and everything "get better" after the first of April.

But it is much easier to carry prices up than to bring them down; and the reduction of prices will not be so rapid as the advance. The luxuries of life will still demand high figures, but the necessaries will probably fall. The bill passed by Congress, and known as the "Foreign Commerce Bill," was a grand finesse, and it will, without doubt, accomplish the object, which was to force all blockade-runners to bring into the country necessaries, for the use of the people of the Confederacy, or cease their operations altogether. The Exemption Bill relating to agriculturists and producers enables the sale of produce to the Government and the families of soldiers, at reduced prices. The quantity of produce raised in the Confederacy within the next year will be greater than ever heretofore; and if the Government will only allow transportation of food instead of cultivate of delicacy, much of fancy articles and high-priced dry goods, there will be no complaint among the poor for want of what they really need; the producers of life will be abundant and cheap, and our people will learn to depend upon themselves and their own resources, on their internal resources, and not on the importation of the entire world.

our different exchanges to compose the alarm about the scarcity of supplies. The difficulty is in the distribution of supplies; it is certainly not as to their quality, when we notice the dirt cheap prices at which grain and meat are sold in some parts of the Confederacy. These prices, estimated in Confederate currency, are so very low that they must indicate a large surplus; and though transportation does not readily distribute it, yet as long as it is in the country, and not positively inaccessible, there is no danger of starvation.

There are sections of the Confederacy, Southwestern Georgia, for instance, where corn and bacon are abundant. We notice, too, that in some of the districts of South Carolina corn is selling at a dollar and a half to two dollars per bushel. Yet in Charleston corn is worth twenty dollars a bushel. The prices in the cities are artificial; and foolish people, among them the Yankees, are very much the error in taking them as the indications of a general scarcity and distress in the Confederacy.

A STRAW.

From the Richmond Examiner, Feb. 27.

Yesterday a badly-written notice was pasted upon the street, corner of Main and Twelfth streets, which read to this effect: "If the wants of the poor are not supplied by the 1st of March they will be supplied at the point of the bayonet." The notice was torn down and carried to the Mayor.

Now we will wager that the poster of the above notice is not one of the class of suffering citizens for whom he pretends to speak; but either a thief, paroled Yankee, native mischief-maker, or an enemy to society of some kind.

CONDITION OF THE NORTH.

From the Richmond Examiner, Feb. 27.

Not only from within, but from without, we draw assured hope and faith; not only from the improved confidence and intensified resolution of the Confederates do we draw bright omen, but also from the increasing bitterness of discord and opposition of interests in the enemy's country. They are in the great year of their Presidential election; and the two parties which are contending for prize are actually making their issue upon the question—what are they to do with us and all that is ours, after they shall have conquered our country. Oh, this issue they will build platforms and vote, or even (what would be still more worthy of their intelligence and patriotism) build forts and fight. Are they to go for Lincoln, and pardon us on the terms of our becoming Abolitionists; or to go for Fremont, and never pardon us at all, but take all our property at once and divide it amongst themselves?—this is the question, but only for the moment; it is sure to change and shift before the election; for LINCOLN's party must bid higher, and come up to the more thorough-going principle of his opponent; then his opponent (FREMONT or some other) will bid higher still; and then the question at the polls will be, whether—after emancipating our chattelsdre—the rest of us are simply to be all deposited, and turned out to work, steal or beg; or, on the other hand, whether we are to be annexed as vassals and serfs to the lands of the future Yankee lords of the soil. There is much to be said on both sides, and we trust that, by voting or by fighting, they will settle it to their satisfaction. One looks with contentment on the stark madness of that monster populace cui bonum sidemptum. But this is not all. While the political leaders are thus intelligently arranging their platforms, Indiana, we learn, has become more disloyal this year than ever; so affirms the New-York Tribune, and the Democrats of that State are putting forth resolutions "eminently favorable to secession." So this year again there are signs of trouble in the great Northwest—not signs of peace with us, but of disintegration and disillusion at home; gracious buds of promise, which with the support of their elections may bloom and blow even into blood, fruit of revolution. Then will be the day of trial for CHASE, and those Wall-street alchymists who search for the philosopher's stone. Well may that minister now put forth all his devices for changing paper into gold. The last advices from the enemy's country apprise us that he has again resorted to the old expedient of pouring out upon the market a quantity of gold, which he has previously bought for that express purpose, and so keeping down the price of the article for a moment. But it fires from hand to mouth; and the difference between our enemy's financial measures and ours is, that ours are based upon fact and truth, his upon ever new frauds. We look in the face and acknowledge our wants, losses, deficits and debits, and accept them, and go upon the basis of them; he goes upon the delusive hope of conquering a continent, and continual tales of imaginary successes, and gigantic movements and expeditions, the rumor whereof, if it cannot conquer a continent, can at least slightly affect the current value of paper in Wall-street.

Now, it is a great thing to stand upon a basis of simple fact and truth. In this struggle, whichever of the two parties first gets itself upon that firm ground must win the day—and we do think that the Confederates are upon it now. They at least know that they must conquer or perish; that compromise there can be none; that the Federal power or the Confederate people must be ruined; that we must dictate a peace, or else our enemies will; we on our terms, or they on theirs; we on their ground, or they on ours; that they must be bankrupt and divided, secession, or we beggared and subjugated, or else—a better peace. We greatly doubt if this position of affairs is altogether in our mind. If any Confederate shrink from abiding this issue, and in this exact form, it is time that such Confederate should gather up and clutch all he can lay his hands upon, turn it into gold and jewels, and sneak away across the lines, provided he can escape the robbers that infest those parts.

THE CHESAPEAKE.

The following novel notice appears in the Richmond papers:

EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA, SS.:

The President of the Confederate States of America to the Marshal of the Eastern District of Virginia. Greeting:

Whereas, a libel has been filed in the District Court of the Confederate States of America for the Eastern District of Virginia by F. E. ANDERS, the District-Attorney of the said district, in behalf of said Confederate States, against the steamer Chesapeake, a vessel belonging to the Yankees, her tackle, apparel, furniture and cargo, for the reasons and causes in said libel aforesaid mentioned, and alleging and propounding that, since the commencement of the existing war between the United States of America and the said Confederate States, to wit: On the 8th day of December, 1863, Alexander C. GUMMERE was a Lieutenant in said United States Navy, and JOHN PARKER, an officer connected with the schooner Hartington, a vessel belonging to the said Confederate States, provided with a letter-of-marque, issued by the Department of State of said Confederate States, as well as divers other citizens of the Confederate States, under the command of the said GUMMERE, did forcibly seize the said steamer Chesapeake; and further alleging and propounding that said steamer Chesapeake is now lying in the neutral harbor of Halifax, in Nova Scotia, within the dominions of Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain, and praying for the usual process of monition of the said court, and that all persons interested in the said libel, her tackle, apparel, furniture and cargo, may be cited to answer the premises, and all proceedings being had, that the said steamer, her tackle, apparel, furniture and cargo may, for the causes in said libel mentioned, be condemned as lawful prize of war; you are, therefore, hereby required to command the said to give due notice to all persons claiming the same, or knowing or having anything to say, why the said steamer, her tackle, and so forth, should not be condemned, pursuant to the prayer of said libel, by causing a copy of the monition to be published in the Richmond Enquirer and Examiner, three times between the date of the said monition and the fourteen days before the day of appearance and return day of this process hereinafter mentioned, that they be and appear before the said court, to be held in the city of Richmond, in the said district, on the 2d day of March next, at 11 o'clock, then and there to abide the judgment of said court on the next day of jurisdiction thereafter; then and there to interpose a claim for the same and to make their allegation in that behalf; and have you then and there this writ, with your return thereon.

Witness Honorable Judge JAMES D. HALYBURTON, Judge of the District Court aforesaid, the 22d day of February, 1864.

(Seal.) LOVTIN M. ELLETT, Clerk.

THE PRISONERS.

THE CARTEL IMBROGLIO.

From the Richmond Examiner, Feb. 22.

Commissioner OLDS returned yesterday from City Point, whither he had gone for an interview with Capt. MULDER, of the flag-of-truce steamer New-York, which steamed away immediately after. Nothing actually was accomplished by the interview. Our Commissioner has, all along, steadily ignored Beast BUTLER, addressing his communications to Gen. HITCHCOCK, the Commissary agent for the prisoners. These official communications exhibit, in another, BUTLER has intercepted, and now withholds, declaring if any intercourse exists at all, it shall exist between himself and Commissioner OLDS, and not between the Commissioner and HITCHCOCK.

ANOTHER ESCAPE OF YANKEE PRISONERS.

From the Richmond Examiner, Feb. 22.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the Yankee deserters confined in the Deserters' Prison, opposite Castle Thunder, and through the position of their quarters, and entering the basement, scrambled away several of the iron bars securing the window. Twenty-two of them succeeded in escaping through the aperture here the delivery was effected. Altogether, there were on the part of the guard and citizens, and sixteen of them were retaken within sight of the prison. They were confined in the cells, and other precautions exercised. The guard were present at the others.

The Examiner of the 26th says: "The prisoners of war held in Richmond now number 9,116, including 1,000 commissioned officers. The number has been increased by the act of Congress, [illegible]

FROM WASHINGTON.

Objects of the Mission of Gen. Sickles to the Southwest—The Florida Expedition—Dinner at the White House—The Negro Question, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, March 1, 1864.

The designation of Gen. SICKLES to visit the armies of the West, ostensibly for the purpose of inspecting their condition and reporting to the Government here, must have a much graver significance than the terms of his appointment would seem to indicate. A military report of the inspection of our forces in the Southwest could be of but little use here. Indeed, there can exist no necessity that such an examination should be made by an officer of the rank of Gen. SICKLES—for officers of a much lower grade would perform that duty far more expeditiously, and quite as satisfactorily.

I shall be much astonished, therefore, if Gen. SICKLES' commission shall not be found by him to be broad enough to justify the application of his time to the observation of the political or civil condition of the territory over which we have obtained jurisdiction by the expulsion of the rebel troops. Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi—the field of his observation—are in that normal condition which now exacts more than a mere military supervision and care. The rebellion being substantially broken in those States, by the expulsion of the organized armies of the Confederate Government, the citizens who remain are manifesting a disposition, not only to avail themselves of the Executive clemency, but also to reënter the Union, and become beneficiaries of its protection and sharers in the political and commercial benefits which must rapidly follow the reëstablishment of law and order. As is not unfrequently the case, those who are moving in this matter, entertain a wide diversity of opinions. They have become divided and subdivided to such an extent as to threaten the defeat of any measures which might be deemed practical for restoring to them the political rights that have been suspended during the encroachments of the insurrectionists.

Those who have carefully criticised the policy of Mr. LINCOLN, must have seen that the reconstruction of the insurrectionary territory and the restoration of civil authority and privileges over the citizens of the rebellious States, who might survive the casualties of the contest, has been his one, steady, consistent and earnest purpose. It has been the existence of this paramount desire that at times made the President appear to forget the objects which the Radicals demanded should be attained by the war. Not that he has ever for a moment been really unmindful of the just expectations of the party which elected him President—but that he has hoped very, very often to work out the problem of emancipation without the threatened sequence of annihilation. No fitting occasion has been omitted to accompany force with persuasion—always some representative of the Executive stood ready to urge his clemency upon those who felt his power.

I think Gen. SICKLES starts to-morrow, vested with the most ample license to restore order out of the chaos of rebellion. I think he is possessed thoroughly of the views of the President, and that the General most cordially approves the Executive policy, and will give his entire energies to its practical application. I think it is expected that Gen. SICKLES will succeed. His executive talent, his great political reputation, his military experience, combined with his knowledge of the history of the country and the character of the people he is to visit, all combine to justify anticipations of the happiest results—results which must cause a speedy and satisfactory solution of the vexed question of reconstruction.

The unfortunate result of the expedition to Florida has created a temporary feeling of despondency. The general impression that the entire movement lacked the military essential of necessity, leaded at first to aggravate the character of the disasters which have overtaken Gen. SEYMOUR. Assuming that it was an isolated expedition, which, however successful, could work no commensurate good, has made many disposed to censure the President for giving it his sanction. But the developments which have followed are demonstrating that the rebels attach an importance to the resources of Florida, rendering it necessary for us to reinforce the original expedition, and to carry our arms in triumph at last to the point for which Gen. SEYMOUR was aiming, and from which he was repulsed. The policy must be to deprive the rebels of all depots or localities that can afford them sustenance, and dispatches received show that in Florida they possess great sources of supply.

The whisky tax is not yet settled. It has been a perfect stock-jobbing foot-ball. Probably more money has been made and lost by selling whisky, long or short, during the progress of the bill, than on any fancy stock in the market. Both sides have had the up and the down, and now, probably, the end will be a compromise—a half-and-half give-and-take.

The first grand dinner that the President has ever given to the Members of Congress, will be given this evening. All the Cabinet, the Commanding-Generals, the Senators and Members of the House, with their families, are the recipients of cards of invitation. It will be a grand feed, with no danger of a repetition of the parable of the feast-maker. The President will not be obliged to send out to the high ways and by-ways to obtain guests. LEO.

SLAVERY AND THE NEGRO.

NEGRO EQUALITY BEFORE THE LAW.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, March 2.

The report made by Senator SUMNER to-day, from the Committee on Slavery and Freedmen, in the bill to secure equality before the law in the courts of the United States, reviews the history of our jurisprudence in respect to the exclusion of colored testimony in the courts, and examines the laws in the several States relative to this subject. South Carolina, it appears, has never had a law excluding such testimony, yet practices exclusion. In concluding this review the report says: "It is difficult to read the provisions in a single State without impatience, but the recurrence of this injustice, expressed with such particularity in no less than fifteen States, makes injustice swell into indignation, especially when it is considered that in every State this injustice is adopted and enforced by the courts of the United States. It further appears that in no State can a slave testify against a white person, excepting that in Maryland he may testify against a white person who is not a Christian. Only under certain circumstances in Delaware and Louisiana can a free negro testify against a white person. The eccentricities of judicial decisions illustrating this branch are numerously cited—among the consequences of exclusion are mentioned the maltreatment or murder of slaves, with impunity, and the perpetration of crime against white men, in the presence of colored persons, with the same immunity from punishment. The report traces this prescription to the barbarous age, and makes it the offspring of Slavery originating in ignorance and prejudice. Among the ancient Greeks, a slave's testimony was not believed upon his oath, but was admissible under torture. The Romans adopted similar legal practices. In England, under the common law, this exscription was again recognized. The grounds for such injustice are examined at length, and the report concludes as follows: "It is for Congress to determine whether the proscription shall continue to be maintained."

THE BUREAU OF FREEDMEN'S AFFAIRS.

The bill which has passed the House to establish a bureau of freedmen's affairs creates that office in the War Department. It is to be placed in charge of a Commissioner, at an annual salary of $4,000, to whom is to be referred the adjustment and determination of all questions arising under any laws not existing or hereafter to be enacted concerning persons of African descent, and persons who are, or shall become free, by virtue of any proclamation, law, or military order, issued, enacted, or promulgated during the present rebellion, or by virtue of any act of emancipation which shall be enacted by any State for the freedom of such persons held to service or labor within such State, or who shall be otherwise entitled to their freedom.

The Commissioner is also charged with the execution of all laws providing for the administration of freedmen, and with the delivery of any bonds of the United States, or any indemnity to any State which shall become entitled by reason of the emancipation of slaves within such State, and of any act of Congress authorizing the issue of such bonds or payment of such indemnity. The bill, among other things, provides for the appointment of Assistant-Commissioners and other officers, who are to permit persons of African descent, and persons who are, or shall become, free, to occupy, cultivate and improve all lands lying within the districts now or hereafter in rebellion, which lands may have been, or may hereafter be abandoned by their former owners, and all real estate to which the United States shall have acquired title, and to advise and aid them when needful, to organize and direct their labor, adjust with them their wages, and receive all returns arising therefrom, which shall be duly accounted for to the Commissioner, and all balances, if any there be, after defraying the charges and expenses of the bureau, are to be eventually paid into the Treasury of the United States.

THE MINORITY REPORT ON THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.

Senator SUMNER having yesterday made a report from the Select Committee on Slavery on the treatment of freedmen, and proposing to repeal all Fugitive Slave Laws, Senator BUCKALEW to-day, in behalf of himself and Senator CARLILE, presented their views as those of the minority. They take the position that the clauses of the Constitution relating to fugitives, if they appeared in a compact between independent powers, would depend for their execution upon the good faith of the party upon whom the duty was charged, but a State aggrieved, in case of a violation of the compact, would have a right to redress its own wrong by a war, reprisal, or other means known to international law. By several provisions of the Constitution, however, all means of redress by one State against another was taken away; and therefore the power to enforce the right of reclamation must exist in the Government of the United States, or it can exist nowhere so against a State. Second, the several decisions of the Supreme Court affirming the law of Congress in relation to fugitives are cited, and the points made in the majority report are reviewed.

It is objected to the proposed repeal, that it is against the existing right of many citizens of the United States; that instead of being a measure hostile to the rebellion, its practical effect would fall upon loyal citizens in the Border States, and the tendency of these laws to prevent the passage of negroes into loyal States is productive of obvious social evils.

MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

SEVEN-THIRTIES.

The following information will be a sufficient response to many inquiries which have been made upon the subject:

Seven-thirty notes, if sent to the Treasury Department for redemption, are paid in the principal in lawful money, and the interest in coin. They are, however, exchangeable at any time before, or at maturity, for bonds falling due in 1881, the principal and interest of which are payable in coin. None of said bonds are of a less denomination than five hundred dollars; the notes are therefore convertible only when presented in sums of five hundred dollars, or the multiples, in accordance with the Act of August, 1861. When, at date of conversion, the accrued interest on the seven-thirty notes exceeds the accrued interest on the bonds, the bonds are issued, if coupon, with full coupons, and if registered, bearing interest from Jan. 1 or July 1 next preceding the conversion, and the balance of interest is paid in coin. When, at date of conversion the accrued interest on the accrued interest on the six per cent. bonds exceeds that on the seven-thirty notes the interest due on the notes is paid in coin, and the bonds are issued, if coupon, with the first coupon stamped with the date of conversion, or, if registered with said date on their face. If, however, parties desire the bonds to be issued with full coupons, or drawing a full half year's interest, they can deposit the balance of interest, if any, in coin, with any Assistant Treasurer of the United States, and forwarded his original certificate of deposit, with the notes sent for conversion. The 7-30 notes should be sent to the Treasury Department, indorsed "Pay to the Secretary of the Treasury, for redemption," with the signature of the party in whose name they are to be converted. The right to exchange United States notes issued under Acts of Feb. 25, 1862, and July 1, 1862, ceased July 1, 1863, by act Act of March 3, 1863.

THE DELAWARE AND RARITAN RAILROAD.

The House Military Committee met this morning to hear arguments on the application to have the Raritan and Delaware Bay Railroad adjudged by the Government as a military road. Mr. BRADBURY, of New-Jersey, at the request of the delegations of that State, and on counsel for the Camden and Amboy Company, addressed the committee against the application. He showed that the road was chartered to go to Cape May, and not Philadelphia, and that Congress was asked to make it a New-York and Philadelphia road. It was the creature of New-Jersey legislation, and asked to be made independent of that State. He contended that the Camden and Amboy charter was constitutional, that every State chartered just as many and just as few turnpikes, canals, and railroads as it saw fit. Its renewal to charter new, no matter from what issue, was never regarded as a violation of commerce, the charge that New-Jersey levied a duty upon passengers from other States was false. She only taxed the railroad company the same for each passenger and fifteen cents for each ton of freight carried across the road. Every State at its own discretion, adopted its own mode of taxing its own corporations, and taxation was never deemed a regulation of commerce. The road was chartered should receive a liberal construction. The road was not going to enrich the company, but was at the time to enable State Legislatures to shed blood. Heretofore Congress had never interfered to exercise this power without the consent of the States in which improvements were made. It would be a signal and sudden New-Jersey to comply with this application. He explained the history of the Cumberland Road, the Wheeling Bridge, the Holliday Cove Railroad, and other matters referred to by the applicants. The reader of his statement, and apparent consideration of his views, seemed to produce a favorable impression.

SECRETARY STANTON ON THE PAYMENT OF BOUNTIES.

The Secretary of War, in response to a note addressed to him by Senator WILSON, requesting his views regarding the joint resolution of the House to continue the payment of bounties to the first of April, says that, in his opinion, the requisite troops can be more expeditiously raised by continuing the payment of bounties as proposed, than by any other means; second, that if present great exertions are being made in the several States to raise their quotas by volunteers, so as to avoid a draft, the people prefering that method of raising troops; third, that Gens. BURNSIDE and HANCOCK, and the State Legislatures and Executives, are earnestly requesting the continuance of the bounties until the 1st of April; fourth, that in his opinion, the joint resolution of the House is wise and judicious, and that the speedy passage by the Senate would greatly promote the public welfare, and strengthen the military force more quickly and economically than can be

VETO MESSAGE FROM HIS HONOR THE MAYOR.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, March 3, 1864.

To the Honorable the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN:

The resolution authorizing the Comptroller to lease the upper floors of building numbers one hundred and fifteen and one hundred and seventeen Nassau-street, (known now as the property of Fernando Wood) for a term of ten years, for the accommodation of the First District Court, at an annual rent of three thousand dollars, is herewith returned without my approval.

Objection first: The resolution is extremely indefinite. It authorizes the letting of the upper floors "of said building." Now the term "upper floors" strictly construed, or in ordinary acceptation, is supposed to include all above the first floor. The building itself is five stories high, and three thousand dollars per annum for all above the first floor might not be considered unreasonable. But what is the fact? The case is not generally understood by parties who ought to be fully acquainted with the transaction, the portion of the building proposed to be leased for ten years, at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, consists of the fourth floor alone. Now, in view of the public convenience, this fourth floor, in my judgment, as well as the rest for it, is entirely too convenient.

Objection second: The locality of the building is not at all desirable for a court-room. Nassau-street is very narrow, and the sidewalks in that vicinity can scarcely be five feet in width. The rooms now occupied by the First District Court, in Cedar-street, consist of the second floor and all above it, at an annual rent of one thousand five hundred dollars per annum. I cannot perceive the advantage which the public would derive from the proposed change.

Objection third: The spirit of our City Charter makes it obligatory on the authorities to offer public proposals in all cases of this character, and I can perceive no reason why the benefits of the principle should be lost in the present instance. This transaction can only be regarded in the light of a contract, and all contracts should be founded on sealed proposals, made in compliance with public notice, pursuant to the provisions of section thirty-eight of the Charter. This is the course uniformly adopted in the purchase of real estate for the use of the City, and there is no difference in principle between the lease and purchase of property required for public purposes.

In order to ascertain the amount of rent already paid by the City for certain rooms in the building designated by the resolution, I addressed a note of inquiry to the Comptroller, and received in reply the following:

COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, Jan. 27, 1864.

Hon. C. Godfrey Gunther, Mayor:

DEAR SIR—In answer to your favor of this date, calling for information relative to premises numbers one hundred and fifteen and one hundred and seventeen Nassau-street, I beg leave to inform you that the premises were leased by this Department from Fernando Wood, Esquire, for a term of three years from May one, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, to May one, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, for the use of the Law Department of the City of New-York, and for which I have paid the expenses incurred by Corporation Counsel and his heads of Bureaux in pursuance of authority conferred by a joint resolution of the Common Council, approved by the Mayor May nine, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-four. The amount of rent paid is three thousand dollars per annum.

(Sig ned,) M. T. BRENNAN, Comptroller.

I am further informed by the Comptroller that the City, in the course of the ensuing Summer, will erect on their property in Fulton-street, an engine house thirty-three and a half feet by seventy-five, the upper part of which can be easily arranged for a Court House for the First District.

I also assert from personal knowledge that better quarters for that purpose can be procured for less than half the money. All of which is respectfully submitted.

C. GODFREY GUNTHER, Mayor.

Which was received, laid on the table, directed to be printed at length in the minutes, and published in all the papers employed by the Corporation.

PAPERS HERETOFORE LAID OVER.

VETO MESSAGE FROM HIS HONOR THE MAYOR.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, March 3, 1864.

To the Honorable the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN:

The resolution authorizing the Comptroller to lease the upper floors of building numbers one hundred and fifteen and one hundred and seventeen Nassau-street, (known now as the property of Fernando Wood) for a term of ten years, for the accommodation of the First District Court, at an annual rent of three thousand dollars, is herewith returned without my approval.

Objection first: The resolution is extremely indefinite. It authorizes the letting of the upper floors "of said building." Now the term "upper floors" strictly construed, or in ordinary acceptation, is supposed to include all above the first floor. The building itself is five stories high, and three thousand dollars per annum for all above the first floor might not be considered unreasonable. But what is the fact? The case is not generally understood by parties who ought to be fully acquainted with the transaction, the portion of the building proposed to be leased for ten years, at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, consists of the fourth floor alone. Now, in view of the public convenience, this fourth floor, in my judgment, as well as the rest for it, is entirely too convenient.

Objection second: The locality of the building is not at all desirable for a court-room. Nassau-street is very narrow, and the sidewalks in that vicinity can scarcely be five feet in width. The rooms now occupied by the First District Court, in Cedar-street, consist of the second floor and all above it, at an annual rent of one thousand five hundred dollars per annum. I cannot perceive the advantage which the public would derive from the proposed change.

Objection third: The spirit of our City Charter makes it obligatory on the authorities to offer public proposals in all cases of this character, and I can perceive no reason why the benefits of the principle should be lost in the present instance. This transaction can only be regarded in the light of a contract, and all contracts should be founded on sealed proposals, made in compliance with public notice, pursuant to the provisions of section thirty-eight of the Charter. This is the course uniformly adopted in the purchase of real estate for the use of the City, and there is no difference in principle between the lease and purchase of property required for public purposes.

In order to ascertain the amount of rent already paid by the City for certain rooms in the building designated by the resolution, I addressed a note of inquiry to the Comptroller, and received in reply the following:

COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, Jan. 27, 1864.

Hon. C. Godfrey Gunther, Mayor:

DEAR SIR—In answer to your favor of this date, calling for information relative to premises numbers one hundred and fifteen and one hundred and seventeen Nassau-street, I beg leave to inform you that the premises were leased by this Department from Fernando Wood, Esquire, for a term of three years from May one, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, to May one, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, for the use of the Law Department of the City of New-York, and for which I have paid the expenses incurred by Corporation Counsel and his heads of Bureaux in pursuance of authority conferred by a joint resolution of the Common Council, approved by the Mayor May nine, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-four. The amount of rent paid is three thousand dollars per annum.

(Sig ned,) M. T. BRENNAN, Comptroller.

I am further informed by the Comptroller that the City, in the course of the ensuing Summer, will erect on their property in Fulton-street, an engine house thirty-three and a half feet by seventy-five, the upper part of which can be easily arranged for a Court House for the First District.

I also assert from personal knowledge that better quarters for that purpose can be procured for less than half the money. All of which is respectfully submitted.

C. GODFREY GUNTHER, Mayor.

Which was received, laid on the table, directed to be printed at length in the minutes, and published in all the papers employed by the Corporation.

PAPERS HERETOFORE LAID OVER.

Report of Committee on Roads, in favor of adopting resolution that Madison-avenue, from Forty-second street to Eighty-sixth street, be regulated, graded, curbed, guttered, and the sidewalk flagged a space four feet wide through the centre thereof, under the direction of the Street Commissioner, and that the accompanying ordinance therefor be adopted.

Which was adopted by the following vote:

Affirmative—Aldermen Fox, The President, McMahon, McCool, Shannon, Chipp, Ryers, Hardy, Kelly, Masterson, Ottiwell, Farley, Long—12.

Supplement to The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MARCH 5, 1864.

KILPATRICK'S RAID.

Gen. Butler Reports the Arrival of Our Cavalry Within His Lines.

The Suburbs of Richmond Reached.

Our Loss 150 Killed, Wounded and Missing.

Colonels Dahlgren and Cook Probably Prisoners.

WASHINGTON, Friday, March 4.

The President has received a dispatch from Gen. BUTLER, stating that Gen. KILPATRICK arrived yesterday within our lines with a loss of something less than one hundred and fifty men, having had skirmishes on the way. Among the missing are Cols. DAHLGREN, COOK and LUNDEEN. DAHLGREN and COOK are supposed to be prisoners.

Gen. KILPATRICK destroyed a large portion of the Virginia Central Railroad, and several miles along the James River, and other valuable property. He penetrated to the suburbs or outer fortifications of Richmond.

Our Washington correspondent telegraphed late last night:

"The report of Col. DAHLGREN's capture is not credited here in military circles.

He was dispatched on special service to destroy the aqueducts in the James River Canal, and cannot be heard from for several days."

A SCARE AT RICHMOND.

FORTRESS MONROE, Friday, March 4.

We learn from Norfolk that there was some excitement there yesterday among the rebel sympathizers, who professed to have intelligence of a great scare at Richmond, owing to Gen. KILPATRICK's movements in the neighborhood of that city. Some rumors were that Richmond was being evacuated. Nothing definite, however, was known.

The telegraph cable across the Chesapeake is not working, hence nothing can reach here except by the regular boat, or by sending dispatches across the Chesapeake.

It was generally understood that a force had been sent up by Gen. BUTLER to cooperate with Gen. KILPATRICK, but nothing had been heard from this force at the time the boat left last evening.

FROM WEST VIRGINIA.

Rebel Troops Moving Eastward—Guerillas—Unfortunate Death of a Union Officer.

HEADQUARTERS, DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA, March 4, 1864.

Refugees report heavy movements of rebel troops Eastward on the line of the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad.

A portion of EARLY's command is reported as having gone toward Lynchburgh.

Our active scouts find a sufficient number of guerillas moving in the mountains to give them constant employment in ferreting them out.

Capt. PINCKNEY, who was captured with Gen. SCHENCK, was killed by our own men while in the hands of a band of guerrillas.

The weather to-day is cloudy, and the temperature very moderate.

IMPORTANT FROM NORFOLK.

Rebels Within Ten Miles of the City—Fighting at Deep Creek—Capture of Union Scouts in the Dismal Swamp—Rebels in Force on the Chesapeake Canal.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

NORFOLK, Va., Wednesday, March 2, 1864.

Last evening fighting commenced between our forces and the enemy at Deep Creek, ten miles from this city, but we have been unable to ascertain the result.

To-day at noon we heard continuous and heavy artillery firing in that direction, but nothing definite has yet been received at headquarters. It is more than probable that skirmishing between the opposing forces is in progress.

Yesterday, a Lieutenant and fifteen men of the Fifth Pennsylvania Cavalry, while on a reconnoitering expedition, were captured by the rebels in the Dismal Swamp.

The movements of the rebels mean something, though they may be intended as feints. It is not likely that they will attempt a dash on Norfolk. If they should they will have ample reasons to regret any such enterprise. Gen. BUTLER is fully prepared and ready for any movement which they may design.

Several gentlemen who started this morning for Roanoke Island, via the Chesapeake and Albemarle Canal, have just returned, and report the canal infested with rebels in large numbers. The boat got as far as Great Bridge, twenty miles from this place, when a commendable prudence for their safety compelled the Captain and his passengers to return.

A scarcity of dispatches was first, once four times this morning, but managed to escape unhurt.

Capture of the Blockade-Runner Scotia.

WASHINGTON, Friday, March 4.

Admiral LEE telegraphs to the Navy Department from Newport's News, Va., that the small side-wheel steamer Scotia was captured by the Connecticut on the 1st inst., having run out from Wilmington on the night of the 29th February. She has one hundred and eight bales of cotton on board. She arrived at Newport's News yesterday for coal, on the way to Boston. The Scotia is a paddle-wheel steamer, about 300 tons burden, was built on the Clyde, and was purchased and sent out from Glasgow in the Summer of 1863. She steams 12 or 14 miles per hour. She has a straight stem, two masts and one funnel, and belonged to the same company who sent out the Princess Royal.

From Fort Royal, S. C., and Beaufort, N. C.

ARRIVAL OF THE TRANSPORT THAMES.

The United States steam transport Thames, Capt. CARRY, arrived at this port last evening, from Beaufort, N. C., and Port Royal, Feb. 28, at 2 P. M., with 2,800 bags cotton, consigned to United States Assistant Quartermaster. She reports passing Charleston at 10 P. M. of the same night, and heard heavy firing. The steamship Arago would be detained at Port Royal until the 4th inst., to await the return of Gen. GILLMORE from Florida, who will send on dispatches for the Government.

Terrible Explosion in Quebec.

MONTREAL, Friday, March 4.

A fearful explosion of the laboratory connected with the military magazine at Quebec occurred at noon to-day. Capt. MASON and thirteen privates were preparing cartridges at the time. The building was completely blown up. The shock was terrific; almost every house in the upper town was shaken from top to bottom. Windows and interior partitions of stores, from St. John's-gate to Palace-street, were smashed, and valuable goods thrown into the streets. The ruins of the laboratory took fire, and are still burning in close proximity to a large powder magazine. Capt. MASON and one or two others have been taken out of the ruins alive; from ten to twelve are missing.

FROM HAVANA AND NEW-ORLEANS.

Arrival of the Matanzas—Accident on the Matanzas and Minas Railroad.

The steamship Matanzas, Capt. LESSNER, from New-Orleans and Havana, arrived yesterday morning. She made the trip from Havana to Sandy Hook with a severe Norther the whole passage, in four days and a half. On 26th, off Fort Jupiter, at 4:45 P. M., passed the steamship Roanoke, for Havana and New-Orleans.

On 27th ult., as the Matanzas morning train was going to Havana, the locomotive ran off the track, causing a general smash up of cars, and unfortunately wounding twenty-two persons. The news reached Havana at the moment of the departure of the Matanzas.

We are again indebted to Mr. J. C. CASS, the purser of the Matanzas, for favors.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Sunday, Feb. 28.

A letter, dated Feb. 19, says "The steamer Africa arrived on the 18th, bringing as a prize a schooner loaded with salt, which had attempted to run the blockade at Monte Christo; the crew, save three, escaped by swimming ashore at Puerto Cabello. This steamer found a schooner that had run the blockade and been put ashore. She was destroyed.

From Santiago de Cuba we learn that the Captain of the Louisiana, of the St. Nazaire line, was buried with considerable pomp on the morning of the 21st inst. His name was DUJARDIN. A dock is to be established at Kingston, Jamaica, for repairing large vessels. The English Talisman arrived at Havana on the 27th, with dates to the 20th from Brownsville and Matamoras. Nothing of political importance has occurred since CORTRONA made himself Governor. He employs his 700 to 800 men in protecting the highway and destroying the highwaymen. A large number of vessels, among them several steamers, were loading with cotton for Europe. One of the latter, (name not given,) was burned lately to the water's edge. She was nearly loaded, and the cotton was all destroyed or so damaged as to be worthless.

The French were expected to attack the place, but CORTRONA would hold out to the last.

The Minister of the Treasury of JUAREZ was at Brownsville.

Small pox has declared itself to an alarming extent at this place.

From Puerto Rico we have dates to the 15th inst. Nothing of interest.

From Fortress Monroe.

FORTRESS MONROE, Thursday, March 3.

The rebel Gen. FITZHUGH LEE arrived this morning on the Baltimore boat from Fort Lafayette.

The steamer Scotia, recently captured while attempting to run the blockade off Wilmington, arrived this afternoon.

The steamer S. R. Spaulding arrived from Moorhead City yesterday, and brings the intelligence that the Quartermaster of Moorhead City reports that on the first instant there was heavy firing in front of Newbern, and that all the citizens were arousing themselves to be ready for any emergency.

Death of Rev. Thos. Starr King.

SAN FRANCISCO, Friday, March 4.

The sudden and unexpected death of the Rev. THOMAS STARR KING, to-day, at once surprised and saddened the whole community. Business was nearly suspended. The courts adjourned, the public offices closed, and the flags on every flagstaff were put at half-mast, including those on every church that every raised a flag.

It is universally conceded that no man had ever done so much as he toward making California loyal; while his untiring zeal in forwarding every benevolent enterprise made him generally beloved.

The dry weather has induced considerable speculation in breadstuffs. Offerings made at $1 80@$1 90 ₩ 100 lbs. for Wheat.

Arrived, ship William Chamberlain, from New-York.

Death of Dr. William Porter Ray.

Dr. WM. P. RAY, the well-known traveler and litterateur, died of malignant small-pox at the hospital at Portsmouth, Va., on the night of the 1st inst. Dr. RAY was a native of Massachusetts, and a pupil of BEN BUTLER, when the latter was a schoolmaster. He entered and was graduated at Harvard College, and subsequently studied at the University of Heidelberg in Germany, from which he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. After completing his studies, he began to travel over the various countries of Europe on foot. His wanderings of this nature were probably more extensive than those of any man living, and at one time he wrote a series of interesting sketches of travel and life, under the title of Fourteen Thousand Miles Afoot. He returned to his native country, and studied for the ministry of the Episcopal Church, upon the duties of which he entered at Indianapolis. Before many years he left the ranks of the clergy, and joined those of literature. He came to this City, and for several years before the breaking out of the war was employed mainly in writing for the weekly Press, to which he contributed many fine descriptive and philosophic sketches and articles. After the capture of Norfolk, he went down there, and engaged in various journalistic enterprises. Latterly he has been the special correspondent of the New-York Times, writing for that print under the signature of "Tar-Kenary." He was engaged in writing for us an account of Gen. BUTLER's late movement in the direction of Richmond, when he was seized by the disease which has carried him to the grave.

Dr. RAY was a man of solid learning, of great and varied accomplishments, and of a most genial and noble spirit. Through all the many struggles of this devious world, he has passed at last into the serene atmosphere above. He was about forty years of age.

Letter from Hon. John Sherman.

To the Editor of the Cincinnati Gazette:

The letter of your correspondent "J. J. M.," in the Gazette of the 25th inst., enables me to state my agency in the distribution of a pamphlet headed "The Next Presidential Election."

A number of copies of this pamphlet were sent to my room either by mistake or with the fraudulent design of securing my frank in ignorance of its contents. They came folded and sealed in the usual way of speeches and other documents, and were distributed by a clerk on the supposition that they were quite a different document.

As to the "Pomeroy Circular," there is but one sentence in it that I do not believe to be true, and that is the first. I have no doubt but Mr. LINCOLN will be elected if nominated. If this circular had been openly published and circulated as an appeal to the people in behalf of Gov. CHASE, it would have been entirely justifiable.

I did not know of its existence until published. I do not believe in secret circulars. As an open appeal to the judgment of the people, I would not have hesitated to have franked and circulated it, even though I do not approve of all its contents.

I prefer the nomination of Gov. CHASE to that of Mr. LINCOLN, as I believe Gov. CHASE has more ability than Mr. LINCOLN, but I am entirely willing to abide the action of the Union Convention at Baltimore. If Mr. LINCOLN should be nominated, he will receive my hearty support.

Very truly yours,

JOHN SHERMAN.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE N. Y. TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, March 4.

GEN. MEADE AND HIS ACCUSERS.

Gen. MEADE has been summoned here by the President, to answer the charges preferred against him by Gens. SICKLES and DOUBLEDAY before the Committee on the Conduct of the War. The matter is assuming a rather serious aspect, and, if the charges are not disposed of, may not only lose Gen. MEADE his command of the Army of the Potomac, but also take from him laurels won at Gettysburgh. A number of officers who participated in that fight have been summoned before the committee.

COLORED PETITIONS FROM LOUISIANA.

A delegation from New-Orleans is here representing the free colored people of that city, with a view to secure their rights as citizens and voters at the hands of Congress. Their petition is signed by over a thousand names, all representing both real or personal property. One of the delegates is counted among the rich men of New-Orleans. Four of the petitioners were soldiers and one a Lieutenant in the French army when NAPOLEON was First Consul. They give as reasons why their prayer should be granted, the services rendered by their fathers to Gen. JACKSON during the British attack on New-Orleans, and their own alacrity in coming forward to the assistance of Gens. BUTLER and BANKS against the rebels, and the fact that they pay taxes upon over fifteen millions of dollars of property, and their unswerving loyalty to the Union. In their interview with President LINCOLN he declined to act upon their petition, taking the ground that having the restoration of the Union paramount to all other questions, he would do nothing that would hinder that consummation, or omit anything that would accomplish it. He told them that, therefore, he did nothing in matters of this kind upon moral grounds, but solely upon political necessity. Their petition asking to become citizens and voters being placed solely on moral grounds, did not furnish him with any inducement to accede to their wishes, but that he would do so whenever they could show that such accession would be necessary to the re-admission of Louisiana as a State in the Union. Senator SUMNER will present the matter before Senate on Monday.

THE REVENUE BILL.

The Ways and Means Committee to-day discussed at considerable length, the new Revenue Bill. Secretary CHASE, in a communication to the committee, says, that in order to bring the revenue up to the amount estimated in his report, it will be absolutely necessary to largely increase the tax on the several articles specified. He recommends a tax of one dollar a gallon on spirits; on leaf and manufactured tobacco, fifty cents per pound; on petroleum, fifteen cents on crude and twenty-five cents on the refined article.

THANKS TO GEN. ROSECRANS.

The House Military Committee at their session to-day, directed the Chairman to insert the name of Gen. ROSECRANS in the joint resolution of thanks to Gen. THOMAS and his army for gallantry at the battle of Chickamauga.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Friday, March 4.

SUSPENSION OF THE DRAFT.

It is ascertained from an official source, that orders requiring a draft on the 10th inst., are suspended. A subsequent day for commencing the draft will be announced in time to make all necessary preparations.

THE LOAN ACT AND BOUNTY PAYMENTS.

The President having approved and signed the bill amendatory of the Loan Act of 1863, and the joint resolution extending payment of bounties to the 1st of April, they have become laws.

THE WHISKY BILL AS PASSED.

The Whisky Bill, as it has now passed both Houses of Congress and awaits the President's signature, imposes a tax of 60 cents per gallon on all spirits which may be distilled and sold, or distilled and removed for consumption or sale previous to the 1st of July next. Any tax after this time is to be provided for by future legislation, and will, doubtless be inserted in the supplemental tax bill now under consideration by the Committee of Ways and Means. The Whisky Bill proposes an additional tax of 40 cents per gallon on imported spirits on hand. The sliding scale of duties on both domestic and foreign spirits, and a tax on the stock on hand of domestic spirits have no place in this bill.

REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS.

It appears from a letter of the Commissioner of Pensions that only twelve of the revolutionary soldiers are now living, whose ages range from 94 to 105 years, and whose pensions only amount to from $25 to $93 per annum.

CODIFICATION OF THE LAWS OF THE NAVY.

The report of the Hon. CHARLES B. SUMNER, the codifier of the laws for the government of the navy, upon which final action is yet to be taken, states that the ancient rules have been retained where they have been found to be sufficient and plain. No provisions of law have been added excepting in cases where necessity has proved their advantage. The most important changes and additions have been made in what relates to naval supplies, naval discipline, and courts-martial. Many enormous frauds have been practiced in furnishing materials for the navy; therefore, additional safeguards were required to insure reasonable economy and ordinary integrity.

A STEAMSHIP LINE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL.

Representatives RICE, of Massachusetts, to-day reported a bill for a steamship line between the United States and Brazil, to perform twelve round trips yearly, the vessels to be not less than 2,000 tons; the expense to be borne in part by Brazil, our own share being limited to $300,000 per annum.

COST OF TRANSPORTATION OF TROOPS.

It appears, from official data in possession of the War Department, that since Feb. 25, 1862, the Illinois Central Railroad has received for transportation of troops and supplies, $208,000, the Burlington and Missouri River road 19,500, and the Mississippi and Missouri Railroad only $40, making a total of $227,540. The accounts of the Illinois Central, prior to March 2, 1862, were settled on the basis of the tariff of the road when such rates did not exceed those of the Scott tariff of 1861, and one-third deducted from the amount thus found due. Subsequent to March, 1862, the accounts accord with the regulations of that date made by the Quartermaster-General in accordance with the suggestions of the railroad managers, convened in Washington by the Secretary of War.

ARRIVAL OF CONTRABANDS.

One hundred contrabands, of both sexes, arrived here this morning from the front. They bring their bedding with them, and a quantity of provisions. Gen. CORCORAN's expedition opened the way for them.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Friday, March 4.

CONCERNING THE NINTH MINNESOTA REGIMENT.

The Vice-President presented a report from the Secretary of War, communicating, in answer to a Senate resolution of Jan. 11, 1864, information relating to the arrest and imprisonment of soldiers of the Ninth Minnesota Regiment by the Missouri authorities. The report states that the soldiers were immediately discharged. The report was laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

MILITARY ROAD AND TELEGRAPH IN OREGON.

Mr. NESMITH, (Dem.) of Oregon, introduced a bill to grant lands to aid in the construction of a military road and telegraph line from Portland City to Dalles, in Oregon. Referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

ATCHISON, TOPEKA AND SANTA FE RAILROAD.

Mr. POMEROY, of Kansas, (Union,) offered the joint resolutions of the Kansas Legislature, in favor of a donation of money lands to aid in the construction of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad. Referred to the Committee on the Pacific Railroad.

THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Union,) from the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Revenue Bill, stated that, after a full and free conference, they had been unable to agree. The disagreement, he said, seemed to be permanent, and adherence on the part of the Senate to its amendments would cause the failure of the bill, and they would then have to wait until a new bill was matured, passed by the House, or appoint another Committee of Conference, from which nothing would result. The committee on the part of the Senate therefore recommend that the Senate recede from its amendments. The bill would then impose a tax of sixty cents upon all domestic liquors manufactured after its passage up to July next, leaving any tax after that time to be provided by future legislation. This recession of the Senate would also leave in the bill an additional tax of forty cents per gallon on spirits on hand. This was incongruous, and was only to be remedied by future legislation.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN the Senate receded from its amendments. Yeas 25, nays 11, as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Anthony, Carlile, Clark, Cowan, Davis, Dixon, Foot, Foster, Harding, Harris, Hendricks, Howard, Johnson, Lane of Indiana, Lane of Kansas, Morgan, Morrill, Nesmith, Pomeroy, Sherman, Sumner, Van Winkle, Wade, Wilkinson, Wilson.

NAYS—Messrs. Brown, Buckalew, Chandler, Doolittle, Grimes, Harlan, Howe, Powell, Ramsay, Saulsbury, Wilson.

AN ADDITIONAL CENSUS.

Mr. BROWN, of Missouri, (Union,) called up his bill directing an additional classified census of the population and resources of certain portions of the country.

Mr. GRIMES, (Union,) of Iowa, opposed the passage of the bill at present, and moved its reference to the Finance Committee. Agreed to.

The special order being called up,

INTERFERING IN ELECTIONS.

Mr. POWELL, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) resumed his speech, commenced yesterday. He referred at length to the last elections in Maryland and Delaware. In the latter State he said it was clear that the Democrats were in the majority, and could have carried the election but for the interference of the military authorities. He contended that there was no necessity for military interference at the polls at the late elections in Delaware to preserve order, and notwithstanding this, soldiers were placed immediately at the polls. While Gen. BURNSIDE controlled elections in Kentucky, E. M. STANTON and his subordinates ran the machine in Maryland and Delaware. He (POWELL) introduced a resolution in the Senate three weeks ago, requesting the Secretary of War to send copies of the instructions given to Provost-Marshals and Commanders concerning elections. Three weeks had elapsed, and yet the Secretary had not complied with the request, thus treating the Senate resolution with contempt. He does not tell us even whether he will reply to our request or not. He said the power claimed in letting the extraordinary order was, that it was a military necessity taken in behalf of the Union struggling for its life. He considered that obedience to the Constitution and laws was the very essence of the life of the Union. The melancholy fact was now presented of a President who is sworn to support the Constitution and laws, invading the statutes and rights of the States. He (POWELL) did not think the Government so much in danger from the rebels as from the machinations of those traitors who would violate every principle of the Constitution at home. The chief reason why the people have quietly submitted to these enormous usurpations of power is, that in a very short time they will have the privilege to change the Executive. For the first time in the history of the country the military had taken charge of elections in the States, and he trusted the Senate would pass such sanitary laws upon the subject as would prevent recurrence of the same state of things. There was not a Senator upon the floor but knew that the President was using the military power of the country to promote his succession. His Amnesty Proclamation was a move in that direction. This proclamation he considered unwise, uncalled for, and revolutionary. He called it revolutionary because it overthrows the Constitution on which our Government was based. What right has the President to dictate who shall or shall not be a qualified elector of a State, and he has done it in the State of Arkansas recently in his instructions to Gen. STEELE?

Mr. POWELL proceeded at length to comment upon the orders issued by Gen. BANKS in reference to elections and regulating labor. He (POWELL) believed that no honest man could take the oath prescribed by Gen. BANKS, as it extended to his future actions, and would be binding to support a policy in the future which would allow negroes, and no one else, to vote, provided it was recommended by the President. He believed that this was a Government for the white man, and that a white man was better than a negro. It would require a standing army in each State to carry out the provisions of the President's Amnesty Proclamation, which would place nine-tenths of the people of a State under one-tenth. This nine-tenths of the population, if they were to be reduced to such an absolute slavery, must be reduced at the point of the bayonet. The President was not clothed, under the Constitution, with the power he had been exercising. If States were in the Union, what right had he to amend or override their constitutions, or fix the qualifications of voters by military power? Our Government was founded upon the principle that the military should be subservient to the civil power. The President, in his opinion, had trampled upon this great principle. He said that WASHINGTON, whom some persons yet considered to have been equal to ABRAHAM LINCOLN, did not think it necessary to subordinate the civil to the military power in the great seven years' struggle in which he and his compatriots were engaged. He would be glad if the weak minded vacillating man now in the White House were imbued with a particle of the spirit which animated WASHINGTON when he resigned his commission at Annapolis, in 1783. After animadverting severely upon the course of Secretary STANTON and Gen. BURNSIDE, in relation to the interference with ministers of the gospel in the performance of their functions, Mr. POWELL concluded.

On motion of Mr. FOOT, (Union,) of Vermont, the Senate adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, March 4.

BRAZILIAN AND UNITED STATES STEAMSHIP LINE.

Mr. ALLEY, of Massachusetts (Union,) introduced a bill authorizing a postal mail steamship service between the United States and Brazil. Referred.

The private calendar was then considered.

REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS.

Mr. LAW, of Indiana, (Union,) from the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions, reported a resolution tendering thanks to the surviving revolutionary soldiers—twelve in number—for their services in that war, by which our independence was achieved and our liberty obtained, and sincerely rejoicing that, by the decree of Providence, their lives have been protracted beyond the period allotted to man, and they receive as pensioners a sum of money which, though not large, helps to smooth the rugged path of life in their journey to the tomb. It is further resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent by the Speaker to each of the Revolutionary pensioners. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

THE MASSACHUSETTS CONTESTED SEAT.

The House proceeded to the consideration of the Massachusetts contested election case, viz: JOHN S. SLEEPER against ALEXANDER H. RICE.

Mr. DAWES, in his argument in favor of Mr. RICE, said the contest did not involve the legality of the votes, but simply the accuracy of the count.

Mr. SLEEPER addressed the House in his own behalf, claiming his seat on the strength of his cause, and arguing that he was elected by a plurality of 22 votes.

The House adopted a resolution that Mr. SLEEPER is not entitled to the seat—yeas 76; nays not counted.

Then, without a dissenting vote, the House agreed to the resolution that Mr. RICE is entitled to retain his seat.

A FAR WEST MAIL ROUTE.

Mr. DONNELLY presented the memorial of the Legislature of Minnesota for the establishment of a semi-weekly mail route from St. Cloud, Min., by way of Fort Abercrombie, Dacotah Territory, and Bannock City, Idaho Territory, to Fort Walla Walla, Washington Territory.

At 4:20 the House adjourned.

FROM ALBANY.

A Discussion on Equalizing Taxation—The Metropolitan Police Bill Dragging—Hudson River Improvements.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Friday, March 4, 1864.

A measure relating to taxation, and of a good deal of importance, was brought up in the Assembly last evening, and the approval of the House gained, in a manner that might almost be termed taking members by surprise. Mr. ALVORD (Speaker) has from time to time for some years, in his place as legislator and otherwise, mooted the doctrine that an equal and judicious taxation of property should exempt no manner of property. Neither churches nor school-houses, nor any of the long list of exemptions, which amount practically, as he affirms, to more than half of the property in the State, should, in his view, be exempted. All property wherever found, he claims, should be taxed, and the assessments should be based upon property, and incidental considerations of any kind should not be regarded. These views he advanced in discussing a bill which provides that the clause of the existing tax laws which exempts the property of ministers to the amount of $1,500 from taxation be stricken out. Upon this bill a lively debate had sprung up, which continued most of the evening session. The debate waxed warm and called up many members, who had not before participated in discussion. Strong ground was taken on both sides, and members felt themselves committed to views which they advocated with as much zeal, as the debate progressed it broadened out so as to embrace the general question of equalizing taxation. At this stage of the debate Mr. ALVORD advanced his views at some length. Others expressed themselves as coinciding with him in opinion as to the general principles upon which a just and wise taxation should be based. The result was that not only the clause of the bill striking out from existing statutes the exemption of ministers' property, was retained, but a provision was inserted in the bill that all property whatever shall be exempted; and the bill in that form, after prolonged opposition, was ordered to a third reading.

While members who voted for this measure very confidently affirm that a measure of so great importance and such an innovation, cannot become a law, and will not even pass the House, they at the same time declare, with a great deal of emphasis, that at the present time such a law is needed, and they are prepared to give the measure their full support.

The Metropolitan Police Bill which is now under consideration before the House Committee on Cities and Villages, does not make very rapid progress. The same influences which delayed action in the Senate are, of course, not inactive now. The further consideration of the bill by the committee is set down for Tuesday next.

The Assembly adjourned at an earlier hour than usual to-day, and the Senate took a recess for the purpose of welcoming Gen. LEGGETT's Brigade, which, having veralized, returns to the State for a short furlough. The brigade was received in front of the Capitol, and, in the absence of the Governor, Senator FOLGER addressed a few words of welcome to the officers and soldiers. He was followed by Mr. ALVORD, who made a brief, animated and patriotic address.

GEN. GRANT'S DEPARTMENT.

The Military Situation in East Tennessee and Georgia.

DETAILS OF RECENT DEMONSTRATIONS.

Grant's Strategy Mystifying the Rebels.

Particulars of the Reconnoissance to Tunnel Hill and Dalton.

Gen. Schofield's Advance and Longstreet's Retreat.

OUR NASHVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.

The Situation at Knoxville—Mystery of Longstreet's Movements—Operations at Chattanooga.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Wednesday, Feb. 24, 1864.

Since my last letter, the situations at Knoxville and Chattanooga have experienced a change. You will recollect that I strongly urged my belief that no fight would take place at Knoxville, notwithstanding the army of LONGSTREET had been heavily reinforced, which latter fact has been confirmed by Southern letter-writers. About a week ago, Gen. GRANT made a feint, which was mistaken by the rebels, who believed it a direction in favor of Gen. BURNSIDE. On the contrary, however, the late movement of our army, instead of being directed against LONGSTREET, was an operation against JOE JOHNSTON, who still maintains a bold front as ever, at Dalton. The rebels were cruelly deceived by this last brilliant exhibition of Gen. GRANT's, (and so were the correspondents,) as everything pointed to a strong movement against LONGSTREET. Portions of HOOKER's army had received marching orders, and it was hinted that Fighting Joe Hooker would lead his forces into battle against the rebel General in East Tennessee. But no movement of HOOKER took place. Gen. PALMER, however, moved portions of his corps south, with a strong cavalry force in advance, and quietly occupied Ringgold, Georgia, his cavalry advancing as far south as Lafayette and Catoosa. At the same time, Gen. BURNSIDE moved toward Sevierville, East Tennessee, with the Twenty-third Corps and two brigades of the Fourth Corps, and cleared the country for seven miles. From loyal citizens, Gen. BURNSIDE obtained the information that LONGSTREET had left the neighborhood the day before, and had taken up at his old headquarters near Strawberry Plains, carefully posting a large force at Ball's Gap, midway between the latter named place and Sevierville, which is believed at Gen. GRANT's headquarters, to be the present position of the enemy in East Tennessee.

The movements of LONGSTREET in East Tennessee, since his collapse in front of Knoxville, have been strikingly mysterious, and what he will do next will be only the less enigmatical from the fact that none now seem to trouble themselves in the least as to his future operations. For the past three months he has been reeling round in East Tennessee like an inebriated person—his swagger and irregular motion being confined to Strawberry Plains on the right, and Sevierville on the left; the Commanding-General himself having within four weeks occupied both places as headquarters. Many think that his last retrograde movement has been forced upon him by the condition of the country, which having been stripped of everything within a respectable foraging circuit, compelled his utter abandonment of his late position. It is possible, however, that all of his late movements are strictly in accordance with a well-conceived programme, and that Kentucky, as has been predicted, may yet receive the blow which could not be given Tennessee. Some argue that fears are entertained that LONGSTREET may attempt the invasion of Kentucky. It is known that he has been favored with the services of BUCKNER and BRECKINRIDGE, but even this, in my mind, does not point to a movement in that direction. His army, in such an event, would have to rely wholly upon the country for support, and it is well known that no army of 20,000 or 40,000 men could find subsistence in Western Kentucky. I still adhere to my opinion that a grand rebel line of battle is being arranged, and that before the Spring campaign is opened, and the inaugural movements are on the tapis, that a large portion of LONG's army, if not the whole of it, will confront the forces of Gen. GRANT. A few weeks must determine this unless, to make up for the dry Winter, the Spring should be extremely wet. Tennessee Springs are notoriously unreliable.

As I have before stated, Gen. PALMER's forces have occupied Ringgold, Ga., a handsome little town twenty-three miles south of Chattanooga, and fifteen from Dalton. There are several fine brick offices in the town; the depot building is of stone, and is said to be a good structure. The population before the war was nearly 1,200. The place was named in honor of the gallant warrior of that name who fell during the Mexican war. Gen. PALMER so disposed his forces that no disaster could happen, and in order to retire in order should there be any signs of having a general engagement. He encountered no opposition whatever, and marched into town on the afternoon of the 23d. This movement was caused as follows: The rebels in our immediate front had become impressed with the idea that Gen. GRANT had sent HOOKER's army and the balance of the Fourth Corps to East Tennessee, and had accordingly made some demonstration in our front, which looked like a disposition to attack Bridgeport. Scouts also gave information that Gen. PALMER, CRITTENDEN, who has all along been in command at Tunnel Hill, had marching orders, and that Bridgeport was his place of destination; thus Gen. PALMER's movement, which is, in fact, nothing but a reconnoissance in force, as Gen. GRANT does not wish to occupy a position at present so distant south from Chattanooga. In the meantime, Bridgeport was strengthened, and the troops relieved from Stevenson, as this is the most important point of the Nashville and Chattanooga Road. An immense bridge across the Tennessee River at Bridgeport. Steamboat building is carried on to a great extent, and millions of dollars worth of Government stores have been accumulated here, while the cutting off of the railroad alone would seriously interfere with the Spring campaign. Great enthusiasm exists at all of the important points upon this railroad, in regard to the whereabouts of JO will be completed which is to open the river at this point.

Notwithstanding the removal South of the rebel CHEATHAM's and WALKER's divisions, composed almost wholly of Tennesseans and Kentuckians, the desertions from the rebel army are on the increase. The books at the Provost-Marshal-General's office exhibit the alarming truth that since the battle of Chickamauga over five thousand rebels have deserted from Joe Johnston's army. This may seem a large story, but the documents are in black and white, the names of deserters and the respective regiments to which they once belonged. Histories of modern armies and wars mention no such astounding facts.

Another batch of villainous Secessionists were to have been sent South from Knoxville on the 22d. This is the third installment for Dixie within the last four weeks. The last batch includes one MAXWELL, who built the bridge at Bridgeport for the rebels, and swindled the Government out of $100,000. He is said to be a vile traitor and an arrant knave.

The Advance Upon Tunnel Hill and Dalton—Considerable Skirmishing at Tunnel Hill—History of the Operations as Obtained from Grant's Headquarters.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Friday, Feb. 26, 1864.

Through the kindness of Major ROWLEY, at Gen. GRANT's headquarters, Provost-Marshal-General of the Military Division of the Mississippi, I learn that quite an affair has occurred at Tunnel Hill during the last few days, and that at present our army is immediately in front of Dalton.

It seems that on Monday last a thinning out of rebel soldiers became perceptible in our front, and subsequently our authorities became advised that first division of Joe Johnston's army (HARDEE's Corps and an additional division) had marching orders for Meridian, Miss., probably to reinforce Bishop POLK, who has recently met a most emphatic defeat through the instrumentality of that bold and skillful maneuverer, Gen. SHERMAN.

Immediately, Gen. STANLEY's Division, which has been in the vicinity of Cleveland, Tenn., for the last two weeks, started, with three days' rations, on Monday morning, with orders to strike the Dalton road at a given point, some three miles this side of Tunnel Hill, where the General would find himself ready to cooperate with the balance of PALMER's Corps (the Fourteenth,) under the direct supervision of that distinguished General himself. Exactly according to programme, he arrived at Tunnel Hill, THOMAS having marched along without encountering any opposition, while the party upon the straight Dalton road skirmished more or less from Ringgold to the place of meeting.

The distance was most admirably considered and executed, the cavalry of the Army of the Cumberland having participated, to a great extent, in the whole movement, and adding lustre to the brilliancy of its present reputation.

The cavalry which preceded the advance of Gen. Johnston's, BARNES's and CRUFT's Divisions, was under the command of Col. HARRISON, and took the direct road leading to Dalton, capturing about one hundred prisoners and stragglers upon the left of the old battle-field of Chickamauga. After a rest at this spot of a few hours' duration, the whole column advanced, the cavalry in front and on flanks, and soon passed over Taylor's Ridge and through Ringgold. Gen. Hooker had at all gaps in this section of the country, some rugged cavalrymen, with a dilettante section of artillery, attempted to question the advance, but one volley from the Fifteenth Cavalry, Col. PALMER, which led the column, caused a precipitate flight of cavalrymen and artillerymen, who succeeded in getting away with their pieces, only from the fact that the cavalcade of cavalry was at least a mile in advance of the infantry, and no risks were to be run for the sake of a couple of guns. The field of the sodden contested Kingston on Monday night, the infantry drawing up for the night about a mile in rear of the town.

The next morning the movement recommenced at daylight, and more or less skirmishing took place, until the arrival in the place of meeting, which was some three miles off from Tunnel Hill.

During the time Gen. STANLEY's Division moved on without impediment, under the command of Gen. CRUFT, of Buffalo and Green River memory, the advance being assisted by Col. LOWE, with a brigade of cavalry.

The next morning the whole corps met at a given place, and at noon found themselves in a deep ravine, or "cove," as it is called in this country, confronting a formidable looking ridge and some earthworks and a few men. The column moved along rather heedlessly, when a telling fire opened from four pieces, which were wheeled up to the masked embrasures, and which proved to be the celebrated field battery of the rebel Gen. WHEELER, and said to be the most excellent pieces and manned by the most excellent gunners in the Confederate service.

Upon the reception of this the cavalry retired, mostly to the flank, and the whole column checked itself, Gen. JOHNSTON commanding upon the left.

In a few moments two batteries of Ohio and a battery of Minnesota Artillery got to work, and in a short time, although our practice is said to have been bad, the rebels limbered up and ran away. Colo. BOONE, of the Second Kentucky, PALMER, of the Fifteenth Pennsylvania, and LOWE, of the Third Ohio Cavalry Regiments, passed up to the works, followed by the brigades of Gens. MORGAN and Dr. McCOOK, and succeeded in capturing about one hundred prisoners, mostly of the Sixth Tennessee. At this time the battery had got a good start and made good its escape. WHEELER himself, it is said, has been detached from LONGSTREET's army, and returned to his old command, which is Chief of Cavalry in Joe Johnston's army.

The regular brigade, under the command of Gen. KIRK, fired two volleys at the gunners, while the brigade of STARKWEATHER, temporarily in command of Col. HAZEN, followed suit. This, next to the brigade of regulars, is the finest in the army, composed of the redoubtable Nineteenth Illinois, Seventy-ninth Pennsylvania, Sixty-ninth Ohio, and First Wisconsin.

The rebels, mostly cavalry and a battery of flying artillery, and few in numbers, persisted in skirmishing until our forces passed the tunnel and its crest, when the enemy engaged in a precipitate flight, abandoning the town and its ragged inhabitants to the "mercies" of the enemy.

We occupied the town of Tunnel Hill early on Tuesday afternoon, and the next morning marched within three miles of Dalton, where the corps halted for want of provisions.

It is represented that the whole movement, intrusted to the care of Gen. PALMER, who has been ably assisted by Gen. WHIPPLE, Gen. THOMAS, Chief of Staff, realized the effects of no bad management, but on the contrary has been a complete success.

The movement, whatever its results, is by no means the opening of the spring campaign, but only a heavy reconnoissance to ascertain the strength of the enemy, and to make a diversion in favor of Sherman.

Gen. GRANT, however, will be open to all advantages, and if consistent, may push on to a considerable distance.

The country in this vicinity is so destitute of everything which might contribute to the existence of man and beast, that necessarily campaigning is seriously inconvenient just now, to say the least.

Our cavalry are not so numerous as we wish, and the teams are not in good order. Were this not the case, and we should get peaceable possession of Dalton, a raid upon Atlanta, or Rome, or both, would immediately follow. A permanent occupation of Atlanta would cause Rome to fall.

The Army of the Cumberland, in its progress South, has passed through fire twice—Boyce, Chickamauga, Johnson, Ringgold and Tunnel Hill.

Boyce is situated in Hamilton County, Tenn., five miles from Chattanooga and thirty-three from Dalton, between which the Chickamauga Creek crosses the road eighteen times. The depot at Boyce is on the plantation of Isaac Dixon, who is now an officer in the Southern army. Before the war he became greatly interested in the grape culture, and had between thirty and forty acres of Catawba vines growing.

Chickamauga, ten miles from Chattanooga, and six from Dalton, and named after the creek of that name, is a straggling town of but few inhabitants, and is located in the county of Walker, Ga. Many writers have had their say about the word Chickamauga—most all of whom say wrong. It is the Indian signification of crooked, and as applied to the serpentine course of the creek, is exceedingly appropriate.

The distance from Chattanooga 19 miles, and from Dalton 20, is the first station arrived at after crossing the Georgia line, and is located after the latter Mr. Thomas V. Jordan, who resides in the vicinity, is owner of Walker County, a district abounding in valuable minerals, several valuable pieces, and magnificent mountain scenery.

Ringgold, as I said in a preceding letter, is situated in a romantic part of Walker County, twenty-three miles from Chattanooga, and was called after the gallant officer of that name who fell in Mexico.

Tunnel Hill, which will be forever after celebrated, stands in Murray County, Ga., where the mountains seem to come together, forming a very pretty amphitheatre, as though with a Titanic purpose of hemming in the railroad. The tunnel at this place is 1,477 feet long, 16 feet high, and with a clear width of 18 feet. It is cut, in a great measure through solid rock, the lateral walls of rock being six feet thick at the base and five feet at the top. The approaches to the tunnel are protected on both sides by massive masonry.

Gen. Thomas' Recent Movement—Advance of Gen. Schofield—Longstreet's Retreat and Its Purpose.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Monday, Feb. 29, 1864.

You will recollect that in my last letter I stated that the affair which was on that time progressing in our front was but a reconnoissance, and as such it has proved mercifully successful. I gave you a detailed account of the movements of the army, and the attack upon and capture of Tunnel Hill, as transmitted to headquarters by official participants.

Early the next (Wednesday) morning, the column crossed Tunnel Hill, with a caution due the occasion, and moved through the gaps a mile toward Dalton without experiencing much opposition.

During the night before, deserters from Kentucky and Tennessee regiments informed Gen. WHIPPLE, Gen. THOMAS' Chief of Staff, that portions of CLEBURNE's and STEWART's divisions had returned—which were half, at least, of the reinforcements under marching orders for Meridian.

Marked vigilance was therefore preserved during the progress onward—the three different arms of the service being kept well together, with the artillery, however, slightly in the rear, in case of the necessity of a precipitate retreat, which event was not unlooked for.

Rocky Face Valley was made, and the crest handsomely carried by infantry and cavalry, before 10 A. M. Dalton was but four miles distant, and no enemy in sight. According to the map, two more ridges were to be carried before the town could be reached.

The first ridge was crossed without much resistance, when visions of a job met the view of the attacking party. The ridge, two miles from town, next what is called BUZZARD's ROOST, presented a formidable appearance. Very well constructed fortifications in the shape of lunettes topped the hills, while the approaches were through a valley or cove, well adapted for defensive purposes.

Heavy skirmishing immediately ensued, and our cavalry, it is represented, behaved admirably. MORGAN's and DAN McCOOK's brigades particularly distinguishing themselves for their daring and impetuosity. The whole column participated in the skirmishing, the Fifth Indiana and Second Ohio batteries taking a prominent part.

Col. GROSS, commanding a brigade in STANLEY's Division, and Gen. TURPIN, of BARNES's command, were detailed to carry an important point upon the left, and within a half mile of the enemy's works. It was carried, amidst a shower of missiles from the rebel right, and held until Capt. LYMAN's battery participated the enemy's compliment. This is regarded as the most brilliant affair of the reconnoissance, and reflects great credit upon the brave commands and commanders who urged its existence.

Before 12 A. M., the whole column emerged from the multiplicity of coves and gaps which abound in this country, and a series of cavalry fights took place until late in the afternoon. About 4 o'clock, there seemed to be an abatement of the enemy's fire, but portions of his cavalry hovered about our flanks. This was quite unpleasant and very dubious. Yet the column still advanced, when a murderous crossfire from a half-dozen rebel batteries opened upon the whole line.

This solved the problem, and the order to fall back was simultaneously given and obeyed. The column fell back in good order three miles, the enemy not deigning to follow.

The reconnoissance, therefore, must be considered successful, as there can be no doubt but the enemy is in considerable force at Dalton. At present PALMER's corps is concentrated in and around Tunnel Hill.

The correspondents, who were present during the engagement, arrived from the front late morning, and speak very highly of the affair, especially that part performed by our cavalry. MORGAN's and DAN McCOOK's Brigades lose heavily. We brought all our wounded off and lost no prisoners.

Our loss will probably reach three hundred and fifty or four hundred killed and wounded. The enemy's loss will also, probably, reach that figure. We captured during the reconnoissance one cannon and nearly five hundred prisoners and deserters.

Very little of WHEELER's cavalry had arrived from LONGSTREET's army, which prevented a rebel advantage of our withdrawal.

Whether LONGSTREET has been called from Tennessee to assist in the execution of some rebel programme in Virginia or Georgia, or whether he has got frightened at Gen. SCHOFIELD, I do not know; but true it is, that on Tuesday last he packed up his baggage, and started due east, and has been making excellent time in that direction ever since. Gen. SCHOFIELD, as soon as it became evident that LONGSTREET contemplated the evacuation of the territory of East Tennessee, commenced a pursuit with the Twenty-third and portions of the Fourth Corps. On Wednesday last our forces were at Bean's Station, the city being in running order from Knoxville to Strawberry Plains. The rebel retreat was the most precipitate of the war, and the arrival of LONGSTREET at any particular point must be awaited with anxiety. A rebel telegram, in chronicling the fact of LONGSTREET's retreat, says that he effected important captures of prisoners, &c., at Lenoir's. This is not only false, but absolutely absurd. Lenoir's is on the Chattanooga and Knoxville Railroad, at which point no forces of LONGSTREET have ever penetrated since his abandonment of the siege. In all probability the Cumberland Gap road will be again opened, if the country is sufficiently rich to support a courier line. The road is not needed to bring supplies, as the army at Knoxville is being provided with full rations by river and rail via Chattanooga.

Since Gen. SCHOFIELD's arrival here a large proportion of the disorder that for months had characterized the administration of affairs in the Department of the Ohio, has disappeared. At one time things were frightful. Gen. SCHOFIELD, to tell the truth, was received quite coldly by the citizens and soldiers of this department, but, after a few weeks of his administration, he is universally esteemed. Mr. CRAM, the Special Mail Agent, who has just arrived from East Tennessee, has placed the following letter upon my table: "Friend T.: I left Knoxville at 7 A. M., Thursday, Feb. 25, and arrived here Saturday morning. Forces moved from Knoxville on Wednesday morning, under Maj.-Gen. SCHOFIELD in person, and were at Strawberry Plains Wednesday night. SCHOFIELD returned from Strawberry Plains Wednesday night, for his baggage, &c., to be sent out by train next morning. Deserters and scouts report LONGSTREET rapidly moving his whole force out of Tennessee, apparently to Alabama, to oppose SHERMAN. Rumors were also current of a Union raid upon the railroad in Lookout Valley. It was believed by citizens that SCHOFIELD would speedily evacuate the whole of East Tennessee. Refugees were preparing to follow up the advance of our army. Supplies were being sent to Knoxville freely by rail. Trains were running regularly between Chattanooga and London. Supplies were taken across the river in boats, and thence by rail to Knoxville. The immense railroad bridge at London, under the efficient superintendence of Maj. WARNER, is being pushed forward to completion very rapidly, and it is expected will be ready for the crossing of trains in three weeks. The steamer Chattanooga has made a trip with supplies from Chattanooga to the lower at Knoxville. A large reconnoitering force is at work upon the railroad between London and Chattanooga, putting the track in splendid order.

Brave old PARSON BROWNLOW still lives, and has fully recovered from his recent severe illness; and is delivering his sledge-hammer blows upon the rebels in his peculiar style. He was to have left Knoxville Saturday morning, and will probably reach here on Monday, en his way to Cincinnati, whither he goes to place two of his daughters, and two of Col. BAXTER's children, at school. Mr. MAYNARD's family are in Knoxville. Capt. J. BAYLY DUNCAN, A. A. G., and for a long time the able representative of Gens. ROSECRANS and THOMAS in Nashville, and recently assigned to duty in the Department of the Ohio, has been ordered to Lexington, Ky., to take charge of Department Headquarters at that point. WOOD's Division is with the advance at Strawberry Plains.

Dr. SEYMOUR, of Painesville, Ohio, the active and energetic agent of the Sanitary Commission at Knoxville, with his corps of assistants, were busy at Wednesday night in preparing sanitary stores, to be sent to the front should they be needed.

CHARLES POTTER, sergeant Co. A, One Hundred and Forty-fifth New-York, charged with larceny, has been found guilty, and sentenced to be reduced to the ranks, and to forfeit all pay now due him, and to be confined in the military prison at hard labor during the balance of his enlistment.

WILLIAM A. BRIER, private, Co. A, One Hundred and Forty-fifth New-York, has been charged with and found guilty of larceny, and sentenced to forfeit all pay now due him, and to be confined at hard labor during the remainder of his term of enlistment.

Both sentences have been approved by Gen. GRANT.

The following named soldiers from the Middle States have died in the hospitals the last week:—CHARLES PERKINS, Co. E, 82d New-York; W. E. THOMAS, 63d Pennsylvania; THOS. FARNUM, 149th New-York.

Gens. GORDON, the murderer of Gen. ROBERT McDOUGAL, made an attempt to escape Friday night, as he thought. A little before dark he made a proposition to the sentinel to give him thirty dollars if he would permit him to get away. The sentinel informed the commanding officer of GORDON's order, when the latter directed him to do it, adding that he would take care of him when he got outside. The sentinel did as he was directed. GORDON walked out, paid the guard the stipulated sum, and subsequently, walked into a bayonet, which had been prepared for his reception. A fatal wound in the abdomen was given, and obeyed, GORDON walked back into his old lodgings, minus thirty dollars.

J. J. RIDER, formerly a conductor on the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad, has been ordered north of the Ohio River, by command of Brig.-Gen. GRANT, to remain during the war. His offence was exhibiting three train robbers who had obtained transportation to this point. The amount of money taken from them is not stated.

JOHN E. OWEN commenced his engagement at the old theatre to-night, and Miss AVONIA JONES at the new theatre.

GEN. McCLELLAN'S REPORT.

Analysis and Review of Gen. McClellan's History of His Military Career.

ADVANCE OF THE ARMY IN FEBRUARY, 1862.

[FOURTH ARTICLE.]

I.

Whether Gen. McCLELLAN ever would have been ready to advance on the enemy, is a problem the solution of which is known only to Omniscience; but the spell was at length broken, not by the motion of McCLELLAN, but by a word of initiative uttered by the President. On the 27th of January, 1862, Mr. LINCOLN issued the following order, which bears title of "General War Order No. 1:"

Ordered, That the 22d day of February, 1862, be the day for a general movement of the land and naval forces of the United States against the insurgent forces. That especially the armies at and about Fortress Monroe, the Army of the Potomac, the Army of Western Virginia, near Munfordsville, Ky., the army and flotilla, at Cairo, and a naval force in the Gulf of Mexico be ready to move on that day.

That all other forces, both land and naval, with their respective Commanders, obey existing orders for the time, and be ready to obey additional orders when duly given.

That the heads of departments, and especially the Secretaries of War and of the Navy, with all their subordinates, and the General-in-Chief, with all other Commanders of land and naval forces, will severally be held to their strict and full responsibilities for prompt execution of this order.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

As the reason for ordering a "general movement" on the day indicated may not be universally intelligible and has frequently been made a matter of wonderment by Gen. McCLELLAN's partisans, a word on that head will not be out of place here. Shortly after coming into command of the Army of the Potomac, Gen. McCLELLAN began to urge that all the armies of the Union should be put under the direction of a "single will." In his letter of October, 1861, addressed to the Secretary of War, we find him urging this with the utmost emphasis and even making it an indispensable condition of any advance by the Army of the Potomac.

"It may still be," he writes, "that by introducing unity of action and design into the various armies of the land, by determining the courses to be pursued by the various Commanders under one general plan, transferring from the other armies the superfluous strength now required for the purpose in view, and thus reinforcing this main army, whose destiny it is to decide the controversy, we may yet be able to move with a reasonable prospect of success before the Winter is fairly upon us."

ACTION, on any terms, being the supreme desire of the Government, Gen. McCLELLAN was, on the 1st of November, invested with the control of all the armies of the United States as General-in-Chief. Bewildering though we find the retrospect of such impotence of ambition as inspired this man to take on his pigmy shoulders a burden which a colossus like NAPOLEON never attempted to bear—the task of at once personally directing the operations of an army of two hundred thousand men in an active campaign, and superintending the advance of half a dozen other armies arrayed along a front of five or six thousand miles—it remains, nevertheless, a fact of history.

Having been vested with the control of all the armies of the Republic, Gen. McCLELLAN conceived the plan of a simultaneous advance of all these forces—a plan, which considering that the several armies were, as we have said, distributed along a front of five or six thousand miles, with lines of operation running through different climates and varying weather, was as impossible as it was puerile. At the wave of the baton of the mighty maestro the whole vast orchestra was to strike up. Until then, let all men hold their peace! In a word, we have here the first draft of that famous "anaconda" strategy, which planted a dozen different armies on as many lines of operation, all on the exterior circumference of the rebellion, leaving the rebels the enormous advantage of their interior position and giving them ample time to fortify at every point.

It was in view of this favorite plan of Gen. McCLELLAN for a simultaneous advance along the whole line that the above Executive order directing a "general movement" on the 22d of February was issued. Gen. McCLELLAN had constantly regarded this simultaneity of action as a condition without which there could be no advance, and all the long and wearisome delays of the Army of the Potomac and its perpetual postponements were saddled on the anaconda. "It was my intention," writes he, "that the various parts [of the plan] should be carried out simultaneously, or nearly so, along the whole line. If this plan was wise, and events have failed to prove that it was not, [!] then it is unnecessary to defend any delay which would have enabled the Army of the Potomac to perform its share in the execution of the whole." He had promised, if made General-in-Chief, to assume the offensive before the 25th of November; but two months had been allowed to pass, and still no sign of activity. Those who are able to go back in memory to those days of darkness will remember the perilous condition in which we then were, with our foreign relations in the most delicate and menacing plight, the Government on the brink of bankruptcy, the capital in siege and the country in despair. It is this frightful state of things which Gen. McCLELLAN now flippantly characterizes as "the excessive anxiety for an immediate movement of the Army of the Potomac which had taken possession of the mind of the Administration." "Taken possession," forsooth! It was an imperious necessity! And it was to meet this necessity, and at the same time to embrace Gen. McCLELLAN's views of a simultaneous advance, that the order for a general movement was fixed for one of our great national anniversaries.

II.

An advance having at length been decided on, it remained to determine the line by which this advance should be made, bearing in mind the double objectives of—1st, the rebel army at Manassas, and 2d, the rebel capital, Richmond.

It is quite certain that up to November Gen. McCLELLAN held no other view of a forward movement than a direct advance on the enemy before him. At what time and by what counsels he altered his mind in this regard are points on which we have no information. But a change of purpose had meantime taken place, and when the President, four days after the promulgation of his General Order for an advance, issued Special War Order No. 1, directing a flanking movement on the rebel position at Manassas, it immediately appeared that he and Gen. McCLELLAN held different views in regard to the line of operations to be taken up. The President's order is under date of Jan. 31, and reads as follows:

Ordered, That all the disposable force of the Army of the Potomac, after providing safely for the defence of Washington, be formed into an expedition for the immediate object of seizing and occupying a point upon the railroad southwestward of what is known as Manassas Junction, all details to be in the discretion of the Commander-in-Chief, and the expedition to move before or not later than the 22d inst.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

The military character of the operation here indicated is obvious at a glance on the map. It was to be a turning movement on the enemy's right flank, by which a position on the rebel rear would be gained that would compel JOHNSTON to come out of his works at Manassas and Centreville, and either give battle on open ground or beat an immediate retreat. It will also be observed that the President goes no further than to give the mot d'ordre—all the details of execution being left with Gen. McCLELLAN.

Against this proposition Gen. McCLELLAN set his face with a determination much stouter than the logic which he employed to support that determination. Having obtained permission to submit his objections to the plan, we find a long letter from him addressed to the Secretary of War, under date of Feb. 3, in which the question of the comparative advantages of a movement on the enemy at Manassas, or a transfer of his army to a base on the lower Chesapeake, is elaborately discussed. This is a problem of capital importance, and so we shall enter with some fullness into the analysis of his reasoning. We shall endeavor not to omit a single point of any weight or value.

We begin with the examination of his discussion as to attacking the enemy at Manassas—a project which Gen. McCLELLAN had most unaccountably ceased to favor. As there was no proposition to make a direct attack on the intrenched rebel position, Gen. McCLELLAN very properly confines his discussion to the question of the side by which the turning movement should be effected. He dismisses the project of an attack on their left flank (at Leesburgh and vicinity) by the observation that the attack on that flank "would involve a long line of wagon communication." We merely remark, in passing, that "long" is a relative term; it was certainly no longer than the enemy would have had to make in massing at Leesburgh to oppose him, and compared with the line he proposed for BURNSIDE's march by Cumberland Gap to Knoxville, it was short indeed. But we do not dwell on this, as the advantages of an attack on the enemy's right flank are evident to any military eye. Gen. McCLELLAN's reasoning on this head we now proceed to consider.

At the outset of his discussion of a movement on the enemy at Manassas by the rebel right flank, Gen. McCLELLAN makes certain admissions as to the advantages of such an attack, to which we call the particular attention of the reader, for we regard them as decisive of the whole question as to the advantages of an attack on Manassas or a transfer of base to any point on the lower Chesapeake.

"Should we," says he, "attack his right flank by the line of the Occoquan, and a crossing of the Potomac below that river, and near his batteries, we could perhaps present the junction of the enemy's right with his centre—we might perhaps destroy the former."

Observation 1. This would be a prodigious gain—one of the capital points of any strategic operation.

"We would remove the obstructions to the navigation of the Potomac."

Observation 2. A consummation most devoutly to be wished!

"Reduce the length of wagon transportation."

Observation 3. Very desirable thing to do.

"And strike more directly his main railway communication."

Observation 4. The very purpose of the President's order. Planted across his communications, we should have compelled the enemy, ousted from his fortified strongholds, to fight a battle for them.

Gen. McCLELLAN then proceeds to exhibit the character of the rebel line, and adds:

"This brief sketch brings out in bold relief the great advantage possessed by the enemy in the strong central position he occupies, with roads diverging in every direction, and a strong line of defence, enabling him to remain on the defensive, with a small force on one flank, while he concentrates everything on the other for a decisive action."

Observation 5. It would be difficult to crowd into fewer words a more complete inversion of the actual relations of the two sides than is here conveyed, and it is a marvel to us how Gen. McCLELLAN could venture on such a statement, if he ever conceived any man would read it may in hand. In the first place, the enemy did not occupy a "strong central position," nor a "central" position of any kind. The rebel line formed the arc of a circle fifty three miles in extent, from below Bolle Plain round to Leesburgh. We held a line fifteen miles in extent. A "central" or interior position is such a position as admits the side having it to effect a more rapid concentration of his force than the opposing force. It was we, therefore, that had the interior position. We go further, and say that if any man will lay before him the map of the continent, it would be impossible for him to find a situation where we could fight with as much advantage as in that we held in front of Washington, with the enemy occupying the position he did. Study the dissertations of JOMINI or the Archduke CHARLES on the theoretical principles of war, attempt to find a theatre in which all the advantages, whether as regards the disposition of the lines of operations, of the figure of the base, of lines of communication or of lines of manœuvre, are thrown completely on one side, and it would be impossible to find a more perfect realization of all the conditions than in that Gen. McCLELLAN had before Washington and the enemy's position. As regards the base, we had it at hand—the Potomac—that base strongly fortified, its flanks forming an elbow, and on the re-entrant, both flanks secure. As regards the line of communications, we had two railroads and two stone roads "diverging in every direction"—these communications were perfectly secure, while those of the rebels, extremely extended (from Richmond to Manassas,) were directly menaced by a single flank march. As regards the strategic line of manœuvre, it was such as would certainly have divided the enemy's right from his centre, as Gen. McCLELLAN himself admits. We proceed:

"Should we place a portion of our force in front of Centreville, while the rest crosses the Occoquan, we commit the error of dividing our army by a very difficult obstacle, and by a distance too great to enable the two parts to support each other, should either be attacked by the masses of the enemy, while the other is held in check."

Observation 6. "We commit the error of dividing our army by a very difficult obstacle." The correctness of the military maxim against a division of force we freely and fully concede. But the interval (namely, from Sangster's to the Occoquan) is but four miles; and does not Gen. McCLELLAN see that when we have a corps on the other side, this stream ceases to be an obstacle? Besides, having gained this position, the Occoquan would present precisely the same "obstacle" to the rebels that it did to us." And by a distance too great to enable the two parts to support each other." True; but not too great to reinforce each other in an action, which is the important point. Gen. McCLELLAN is grossly inconsistent in this whole reasoning: he objects to dividing his army by an interval of four miles, and proposes by his plan to divide it by an interval of two or three days—that is, from Washington to Urbana!

"Our slow progress will enable him (the enemy) to divine our purpose and take measures accordingly."

Observation 7. Why should the progress be "slow?" This is pure assumption—the progress should not be slow under the conditions we have mentioned. Furthermore, is the period required to reach the enemy's position—one day's march—would give the enemy time to "divine our purpose," what shall we say of the opportunities afforded them by the time required to carry out his plan—namely, a transfer of base to the Rappahannock? This time, according to Gen. McCLELLAN's own showing, and his own experience, is one month. We are to suppose the rebels simple enough not to "divine" in a month in the one case what they would "divine" in a day in the other case! This is courageous reasoning.

"Assuming the success of this operation, and the defeat of the enemy as certain, the question at once arises as to the importance of the results gained. I think these results would be confined to the possession of the field of battle, the evacuation of the line of the upper Potomac by the enemy, and the moral effect of the victory; important results, it is true, but not decisive of the war, nor securing the destruction of the enemy's main army, for he could fall back upon other positions, and fight us again and again, should the condition of his troops permit."

Observation 8. A tactical victory in the field, the compulsory driving of the enemy back from their cherished position, the relief of the blockade of the Potomac, and the "moral effect of the victory," with the losses, disasters and demoralization that would have been inflicted on them—all of which Gen. McCLELLAN admits were within his grasp, by the movement indicated—were we think, well worth the effort. Why, considering what a priceless boon such a result would have been at that time, the whole nation would have called him blessed! But it would not have been "decisive of the war"—much was the wildly puerile ambition that possessed him; and in order to end the war, he resolved to seek a theatre where it was perfectly evident beforehand and became a sad matter of fact afterward, that he would find all the obstacles there were at Manassas with none of its advantages! What this theatre was we now proceed to examine.

III.

"The second base of operations available for the Army of the Potomac is that of the lower Chesapeake Bay, which affords the shortest possible land route to Richmond, and strikes directly at the heart of the enemy's power in the east. THIS BASE IS OPEN BEFORE AND AVAILABLE AT ALL SEASONS OF THE YEAR."

Observation 1. "The roads in that region are passable at all seasons of the year." It is on this enormous assumption that he bases the whole plan of campaign! He proposes to embark his troops at Alexandria, go down the Chesapeake Bay, and up the Rappahannock to Urbana, or down to Fortress Monroe, with the view of there finding a passage to Richmond, where the roads would be "passable at all seasons." It is hard to tell where to begin answering a statement like that. How did he know the roads there were "passable at all seasons?" It would certainly be natural to conclude, from the mere physical geography of the region, that the roads are not "passable at all seasons." We have there precisely the physical conditions to make impassable roads—a region on the drainage and "divides" of rivers, where the streams, losing their force, spread out in swamps and bogs. But if, going beyond theoretical considerations, Gen. McCLELLAN had taken the trouble to look at the map, he would have noticed, on the march of fifty miles from Urbana to Richmond, the "Dragon Swamp," and half a dozen other swamps, besides the Pamunky, the Matapony and the Chickahominy. On the Peninsula we need not say what he would have found; we know what he did find. It is melancholy to think that the fate of a campaign should be intrusted to a mind capable of such stupendous assumptions!

"A movement in force on that line obliges the enemy to abandon his intrenched position at Manassas, in order to hasten to cover Richmond at Norfolk."

Observation 2. There is no doubt of this, but there is no doubt also that the rebels, by a double line of railroad, could reach the front of Richmond much sooner than Gen. McCLELLAN could by water; for it took him a month; and when the rebels got inside their works at Richmond, in what respect would McCLELLAN be better off than he was when they were at Manassas? He would be worse off, because he would be weaker and further from his base, while the rebels would be stronger, by concentration, and resting on their base.

"Should we be beaten in a battle, we have a perfectly secure retreat down the Peninsula upon Fort Monroe, with our flanks perfectly covered by the fleet."

Observation 3. He was "beaten," and found his retreat so secure, that POPE had to be put into a scrape to extricate him.

"Should it be determined to operate from the lower Chesapeake, the point of landing which promises the most brilliant results is Urbana, on the lower Rappahannock. This point is easily reached by vessels of heavy draught; it is neither occupied or observed by the enemy—it is but one march from West Point, the key of that region, and thence but two marches to Richmond. A rapid movement from Urbana would probably cut off Magruder on the Peninsula, and enable us to occupy Richmond before it could be strongly reinforced. It would we fell in that, we could, with the cooperation of the navy, cross the James, and throw ourselves in rear of Richmond, where we would be in easy reach of our base, while the enemy would be untenable, with us on the southern bank of the river."

Observation 4. "This point is easily reached by vessels," &c. The "ease" with which such a transfer can be made, and the "brilliant rapidity" of such an operation, involving the collection of hundreds of vessels, the embarkation of the army, infantry, artillery, cavalry, ammunition, supplies, material, and their debarkation, with such meagre wharfage as a village like Urbana presents—and matters on which Gen. McCLELLAN had afterwards some experience. How he spoke then we may see. Four months after Gen. McCLELLAN had performed this operation and completed his "brilliant" campaign, it became necessary to move the army back to save the menaced capital, and here is the strain in which he then writes to Gen. HALLECK:

"I fear you will find very great delay in embarking troops and material at Yorktown and Monroe, both from want of vessels, and of facilities of embarkation; at least two additional wharves should at once be built at each place. I ordered two at the latter some (2) two weeks ago, but you countermanded the order.

With all the facilities at Alexandria and Washington, (6) six weeks about were required in embarking this army and its material.

It is not possible for any one to place this army where you want it, ready to move, in less than a month."

Now, all this reasoning was just as cogent before Gen. McCLELLAN went, if it had only occurred to him. And if it did not occur to him, it was suggested to him; but that was a time when his ears were shut to all suggestions.

"Would cut off MAGRUDER in the Peninsula," etc. But would not MAGRUDER have the ability to get beyond West Point as quick as McCLELLAN could get over all the obstacles—swamps, the Pamunky, etc.—between Urbana and that point, where he would dispute the passage of the rivers, and fall back on the main force? "Thus forcing the enemy to come out and attack us, for his position would be untenable," etc. Richmond can stand a siege better from the south than the north side, for it then has as lines of communication the river, the canal and the railroad.

"Should circumstances render it not advisable to land at Urbana, we can use Mobjack Bay, or, the worst coming to the worst, we can take Fort Monroe as a base, and operate with complete security, although with less celerity and brilliancy of results, up the Peninsula."

Observation 5. "The worst" came "to the worst." History records the result.

IV.

If the above reasoning be correct, it results that Gen. McCLELLAN, in transferring his base from Washington to the lower Chesapeake, merely shifted, but did not remove the difficulty. Calum non animum mutant qui trans mare currunt. In running "across the sea," indeed, he changed his "sky," but not the task imposed upon him. It still met him in the face as knotty and more knotty than before. It was with an almost prophetic consciousness of this fact that President LINCOLN, on the same day as that on which Gen. McCLELLAN's letter is dated, sent to him the following note:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, Feb. 3, 1862.

MY DEAR SIR: You and I have distinct and different plans for a movement of the Army of the Potomac. Yours to be done by the Chesapeake, up the Rappahannock to Urbana, and across land to the terminus of the railroad on the York River; mine to move directly to a point on the railroad southwest of Manassas.

If you will give satisfactory answers to the following questions, I shall gladly yield my plan to yours:

1. Does your plan expose Washington to a much larger expenditure of force and army than mine?

2. Wherein is a victory more certain by your plan than mine?

3. Wherein is a victory more complete by your plan than mine?

4. In fact, would it not be less valuable in this: that it would break no great line of the enemy's communications, while mine would?

5. In case of disaster, would not a retreat be more difficult by your plan than mine?

Yours, truly, ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

The tragedy of these events is not less conspicuous than the compendious completeness with which they cover the whole ground. They were never answered, simply because they were and are unanswerable. But President LINCOLN, feeling the weight of the maxim, that a General will do better following an inferior plan which he has own than a superior one which is the conception of another, and, above all, desirous that some move should be made, and willing to sacrifice any minor consideration to that end, allowed Gen. McCLELLAN to have his own way. How this resulted, and how the eternal principles of military science vindicated themselves therein, will be made apparent in our next article.

Mr. George Thompson's Visit to America.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Suffer me to correct an impression, which I fear your remarks in the Times of yesterday will have made upon some of your readers, touching Mr. Geo. THOMPSON—an impression which would be unjust to that noble man and valiant friend of America, as it would be ungenerous to the occasion of his visit to this country.

Whatever Mr. THOMPSON did or said "thirty years ago" worthy of rebuke, were better forgotten perhaps, with some other things of like remote periods, if for no other reasons than those—that a contrast arises, moral, put at the time, and that it is not wise to invite neglement, memories, or to "stir and blend" in those who should be friends. I say no more of the past, but if it be asked: What claim Mr. THOMPSON has now upon the cordial good-will and hospitality, not of any one clique or party, but of all loyal American citizens? I think I can supply some items toward an answer.

It is well known here that a number of gentlemen in England who knew America, and knowing loved, and loving dared defend her, formed a society having for its object the vindication of the American people in their attempts to suppress the rebellion. Heavy sums of money (not a penny of it American) were cheerfully subscribed; books, pamphlets, &c., were printed and scattered broadcast over the land; while in almost every city, town and village in Great Britain, meetings were held to discuss the question, and to evoke an expression of English feeling on the subject. With what effect is generally known in this country. Lord JOHN RUSSELL was constrained to confess that the popular feeling of England was with the North in the struggle, and the fate of the British Cabinet underwent a marked change.

Now, if the American people be disposed to award no higher acknowledgment to those efforts than that they were friendly, to that extent Mr. GEORGE THOMPSON merits their kindliest recognition, for he were, far beyond all comparison, the lion's share in the work. The inspiration of the occasion made the man young again, and he almost new throughout England and Scotland, to dispel ignorance, to subdue prejudice, to combat malice, that thus he might bring the good will and sympathy of the British people to the aid of America in the hour of her great need.

What I wish especially to be observed in this connection is, that he did this not merely as an Abolitionist, for Mr. THOMPSON had the sagacity to see very early in the struggle that human freedom was only one among the many subjects that were threatened by the rebellion; so that he allowed a higher platform, and lost nearly party views and aims in a generous enthusiasm to rebuke the American Government,

NEW BOOKS.

DALETH; OR, THE HOMESTEAD OF THE NATION. Large Illustrated. By EDWARD L. CLARK. 8vo. Boston: TICKNOR & FIELDS.

This beautiful book is a fine specimen of what the French call Livres de luxe—works, produced in a style which shows that the gratification of a cultivated taste has been aimed at, rather than deference to the usual prudential considerations that limit the outlay incurred in the "getting up" of a volume. The paper and print leave nothing to be desired, and the illustrations, nearly one hundred in number, including wood cuts and chrome-lithographs of great beauty, reproduce the modern scenery and antiquities of Egypt, either from photographs or other sources of equal authenticity. The book itself is not the dry record of a traveler's progress from day to day. Mr. CLARK, with whose name we are not familiar, but who writes like a practiced author, has been deeply impressed by a visit to the land where the Nile

"Flows through hushed old Egypt and its sands, Like some grave mighty thought threading a dream—"

and the present volume is an attempt to impart to others the vivid realization of primeval historic times, for which the Egyptian remains afford such unexampled and unique materials. The title is taken from the ancient Hebrew Le-ter Daleth, signifying a door. It is adopted by the writer to typify the view he takes of the world's progress, according to which—"From whatever country we look back along the pathway of the arts and sciences, in the dim distance tower the mighty gateways of Egypt—the homestead of the nations—beneath which the rites of religion and the blessings of civilization have passed out into the world; and with grateful respect we confess that on the banks of the Nile stands the true Daleth of the nations." This idea is the key-note of the book, and expressed with less limitation than exact truth would require. How a country that never sent out a colony can be called the Homestead of Nations is not obvious. No one can now dispute the antiquity of Egyptian civilization; but that it was the source and parent of all others, is the sense assumed by the writer, in his enthusiasm. Hastily created and influenced by the physical features of the land which it was evolved, the civilization of Egypt never possessed that energetic and progressive character necessary to extend its ascendancy over other nations and countries. The "Wisdom of the Egyptians" was always a sealed book to other races, and though the Greeks, with a natural love of the marvelous, were prone to exaggerate their obligations to this recondite source, the most profound modern research tends to limit materially the views they entertained on the subject, and later discoveries show conclusively that the true "motive" of their late Art came not from Egypt, but from the Semitic races of Western Asia, while their literature can scarcely be said to exhibit a single trace of African influence. In the useful arts, indeed, the progress of the Egyptians afford continual matter for surprise; but the lack of derivation from one nation to another has been carried too far. We are at the present day how Mr. CLARK gives rise to like suggestions, and expect us for supplying them, and the same process has been especially at work in the world's history from the earliest ancient date. Considering, therefore, that Mr. CLARK pushes further than facts will justify his theory of Egypt's all-pervading paramount, there is ample room for the study of a life-time in the archæological treasures and unvarying natural peculiarities that characterize that land of ancient night and mystery. The enthusiasm that fires the soul of others with a spark of its own fervor is eminently a quality of Mr. CLARK's book, and renders it admirably adapted for an introduction to the study. His own personal adventures had been supplemented by research among the best authorities, from whom the facts are derived. They owe their setting to the author, and are so arranged as to furnish an elaborate and glowing picture of the land and its marvels of the old Pharaonic era, or more modern times.

BORDELLO—STRAFFORD—CHRISTMAS EVE AND EASTER DAY. By ROBERT BROWNING. 12mo. Boston: TICKNOR & FIELDS.

This handsome volume completes Messrs. TICKNOR & FIELDS' reprint of ROBERT BROWNING's poetical works. Its contents, though now first presented to the American public, are not the latest in the order of time of the author's writings. His growing popularity it is that causes a demand for poems formerly passed over as little likely to meet with success. Mr. BROWNING has gradually found an audience educated to estimate his merits. He has never gone out of his way to seek popular applause, but has kept on his appointed course, undeterred by years of neglect and misconstruction of his poetical creed; and must now deeply enjoy the satisfaction of meeting in his life-time with the appreciation that is too often a garland flung on the bearse of writers who are in advance of their own generation. The poems contained in this volume have been too long known to his admirers to need criticism at the present day, if not so widely discussed as some of his other writings. Strafford was brought on the stage by Mr. MACREADY, but did not prove very popular as an acting play. The subtle psychology displayed in Sordello has always rendered it a favorite with the few, though, perhaps, from the same cause, it has been accused of unintelligibility by the multitude. The volume is dedicated to JOHN FORSTER, "the friend of thirty years;" and a notice—in which Mr. BROWNING expresses his gratitude to Messrs. TICKNOR & FIELDS, and does his friend ensure them the right of republication of all his works, present and to come—testifies to the liberality of his American publishers.

THE HAND-BOOK OF CALISTHENICS AND GYMNASTICS. By J. MADISON WATSON. With illustrations. 8vo. New-York: SCHERMERHORN, BANCROFT & CO.

This is the most elaborate attempt yet made to apply practically to educational purposes the great truths of physiology, relating to physical culture and training. These facts, though universally recognized by science, have too often remained a dead letter, and the education of the masses has been carried on not only in neglect, but in absolute contradiction and opposition to the vitally important considerations deducible from them. Mr. WATSON's object is to strengthen the lungs and every portion of the muscular system by appropriate exercises that shall at once be pleasing, healthful and invigorating, conducted by simple means, within the reach of every school and family. The first division, entitled "Vocal Gymnastics," relates to the subject of respiration, the management of the voice, and the theory and practice of elocution, based on physiological and anatomical data. The second, "Calisthenics," embraces the manual exercises, games, &c., adapted to the purposes of primary instruction, with appropriate music. The third portion, "Gymnastics," continues the same subject, with more advanced lessons and apparatus, rendering it a complete instruction-book of exercises that develop the lungs, the voice, the organs of speech, the joints, the sinews and the muscles. Numerous illustrations render clear the instructions of the teacher, and the work has evidently been prepared by one who is conscious of the requirements of the learner, and has studied the most effectual way of meeting and supplying them. To those in authority, whose influence would be effectual in promoting the circulation of this book, it becomes a positive duty so to do by every means in their power. All who have the physical welfare of the human race at heart, and understand how powerless the intellect is to contend against the burden of a feeble and emaciated frame, are equally interested in its teachings, and answerable, each in his own sphere, however small it be, for the consequences of neglecting them.

AN INTRODUCTION TO MUNICIPAL LAW—Designed for General Readers, and for Students in Colleges and Higher Schools. By JOHN NORTON POMEROY, Counselor at Law. 8vo. New-York: D. APPLETON & CO.

The present eventful times are bringing into unprecedented prominence whole classes of questions and subjects that were once "shelved" as no longer matters that needed discussion. They show the necessity that exists for every nation to keep its institutional armor bright. Our highest systems of education have been fatally neglectful of the duty of imparting a knowledge of the principles that lie at the root of all law and social order, written or traditional, involving the disposal of questions that must seriously affect the national life and welfare, now under discussion by parties too often all too inadequately furnished for the occasion. To remove this reproach from our educational classes is the object of Mr. POMEROY's work. "Its aim is to explore somewhat, though not in a merely antiquarian spirit, the sources of the law of England and America—to disclose salient points of contact between jurisprudence and history—to bring out into relief the vital and organizing principles of the system, and to suggest some comparisons between the methods and results of different national legislations." Merely professional works, as the Commentaries of BLACKSTONE and CHANCELLOR KENT, however admirably adapted for the fulfilment of their more special purpose, naturally do not serve an object for which they were never intended. Mr. POMEROY first takes up the law as now existing, shows its external forms, and the various means by which its rules become clothed with a compulsive character. He then traces the national sources from which many of its more important principles are drawn. The vast field of inquiry gone over in this survey may be estimated when it is considered that the origin of American and English law cannot be properly investigated without a competent knowledge of the Anglo-Saxon laws and institutions, the Feudal system, the Roman law, and the maritime codes of the middle ages. On all these topics Mr. POMEROY, so far as a non-professional reader can judge, shows himself to be perfectly at home, and everywhere furnishes the latest results of inquiry from the most trustworthy sources. This leads to the practical inferences deducible from the previous course of study. These are illustrated in "Outlines of our Municipal Law," including "Persons and Personal Rights," "Property," its obligations and the rules that govern its acquisition and distribution, and the law of contracts. Under the first head are discussed the status of slavery and the general principles which have regulated it. The constitutional power of the Government in relation to the limitation of personal rights, by the promulgation of military and martial law, &c. The importance of leading minds on these impendinc topics, not on temporary expediency, but on the firm foundation of acknowledged principle, is obvious to all, and Mr. POMEROY's work, besides its general value, has an immediate bearing on these and many other subjects that meet us in every newspaper, and are current topics of discussion wherever men assemble together. As there is no book to compete with this manual in existence, we cannot doubt that its value will be fully recognized, and the author repaid for his laborious and acceptable work.

PRIVATE MILES O'REILLY, FORTY-SEVENTH Regiment New-York Volunteers—His Life and Adventures, Songs, Services and Speeches. Illustrated handsomely by MULLER. New-York: CARLETON.

It is too late to inquire whether this be a good book or not. It had its reputation established before being issued in book form; and that it will have a wide circulation is very certain. It appeals largely, though perhaps coarsely, to the sympathies of three powerful classes—the soldiery, the sailors of our navy, and the politicians of all classes and parties. It seems at home with all, and is evidently from the pen of a man who has had large and varied experience in American public life and the public service. Many of its humorous songs will enjoy much more than the ephemeral life for which they were originally destined, and of its serious lyrics, the war has yet produced few things finer than the picture of "A Review," the "Song of the Soldiers," and the lines commencing "Men who have in many a battle." As a hand-book of city, State and national politics, the work appeals to every "inside politician," as evidently the work of an "insider." There is intimate personal knowledge of the men and things talked about all through the book; and a free use of personalities is the leading characteristic in every chapter. "Miles" seems at home with Admiral Du Pont and his iron-clad Captains on board the monitors in front of Charleston; but quite equally at home in Tammany Hall or the Democratic State Convention. Walks in the White House, and in pleasant confab with "the Cabinet and foreign Ministers," his good humor—which is in three parts made up of Irish independence—never deserts him for a moment. On the whole, "Miles" is a success, and therefore presumably deserves to succeed. The publisher describes himself in many pathetic advertisements as totally unable to supply the rapid demand for the book, which is already in its third edition; and doubtless amongst all our armies in the field, the contribution of the distinguished "high private" to the literature of the age will be received with favor.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY, CORRESPONDENCE, &c., OF LYMAN BEECHER, D.D. Edited by CHARLES BEECHER. With illustrations. In two volumes. 12mo. Vol. I. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS.

This bulky volume is a flagrant instance of a literary offence now too commonly committed. It contains a most multifarious collection of materials—letters, dialogues, extracts from sermons, resolutions, journals, &c., of Dr. BEECHER and various members of his family, brought together with a view to illustrate the private and public life of that distinguished pulpit orator and divine. Each of his children has contributed to the stock, and so ample is the amount of matter thus accumulated, that in proper hands a vivid and effective portraiture might be drawn from it that would illustrate not only the subject of the biography, but also the social and religious life of New-England at the commencement of the present century. It seems, however, that each reader is expected to do for himself what should have been the task of a competent editor, and the whole heterogeneous mass, of raw material is thrown before the public with no selection or suppression, and but little attempt at arrangement. Posterity is too busy to cherish a very lively interest in the domestic concerns of any except a few "foremost men." Dr. BEECHER can scarcely be reckoned among them, and the true lesson afforded by his life and labors is apt to be overlaid by the babble of the nursery and the gossip of the household and farm that is allowed to encumber this book. As the father of a remarkable race, Dr. BEECHER will probably be longer remembered than by his own deeds, though the story of his life and progress from the plough to the pulpit would be full of interest if properly told, and may be considered as eminently typical and American in all its distinctive features. As a family characteristic, must be noticed a remarkable absence of the shrinking dread of publicity—the fear of irrelevant intrusion—that is a dominating principle in most minds of refinement and culture. This whole work is compiled, apparently, in the total absence of any such feeling; and in the publication of the private letters of a lady yet living, where to the ear of a father she pours out the inmost sorrows of her soul almost too sacred even for his cognizance, we cannot but remark a departure from the ordinary decencies of reticence at once inexplicable and astounding. Another volume will complete the work, which can only be viewed as a foundation of a structure that needs completion from another hand.

GILEAD; OR, THE VISION OF ALL SOUL'S HOSPITAL. An Allegory. By Rev. J. HYATT SMITH. 12mo. New-York: C. SCRIBNER.

The Allegory of the Christian life was so eminently exemplified by BUNYAN, "the inspired dreamer," in his undying work, that all who come after him in the same walk run the risk of comparison with his unique original. There are, however, various modes of treatment of which the subject is capable, and Dr. SMITH presents us with one that is highly suggestive. He exemplifies in allegory the sham and the real of religion and the Christian life, but owes nothing to any predecessor. With much of the antique richness of style, his book ranks him high among practical religious writers.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

—A curious instance of the all-pervading influence and vigilance of the Imperial Government of France is shown in Messrs. DIDOT's great Biographical Dictionary Nouvelle Biographie Générale, which has been in course of publication in Paris for the last ten or twelve years. The volume containing "MAHOMET" has been kept back since 1861, that justice might be done to the illustrious name, and now appears strictly with a "Biography of NAPOLEON, his Dynasty and the Members of the Bonaparte Family," filling nearly four hundred closely printed pages. The life of MAHOMET I. is admirably written by M. RAMPE, but evidently drawn its inspiration from a higher source. It dealt less with the warlike aspects of his reign than with his civil policy in regard to France and Europe, and in connection with the Life of Louis Napoleon may be considered an authorized exposition of the Idées Napoléoniennes that have proved of so much vitality in the hands of the "Nephew of his Uncle." An interesting literary article is a sketch of the "Bibliographie Napoléonienne," in 20 pages. The writers say that the mass of works in different languages written on the subject of NAPOLEON, his character, wars, institutions, government, &c., is already so vast that it is impossible for any person to master it, or even acquire a knowledge of its extent. It gives a catalogue raisonné of about two hundred of the leading books relating to his career, but which only form a very small portion of the whole number extant.

—Sir J. EMERSON TENNENT's new work, just published by Messrs. LONGMAN, The Story of the Guns, a book written for popular reading, shows how general is the interest felt on the great artillery questions of the day, which it aims to render interesting and intelligible to the million. Unfortunately, Sir JAMES, instead of an impartial historian, has shown himself a decided partisan of Mr. WHITWORTH's system. Sir WILLIAM ARMSTRONG's friends are loud in their complaints of the injustice done to his favorite guns, and the historian of Ceylon is not likely to increase his reputation by his recent book.

—The first part of the reproduction by photolithography of the first folio Shakespeare has just appeared. The photographic impressions are taken from the best copies of his copies, one in the British Museum, and the other belonging to Lord ELLESMERE. The publication is superintended by Mr. HOWARD STAUNTON, the editor of the "Library Shakespeare" recently published by Messrs. ROUTLEDGE. As the copy presents an absolute identity with the original, it offers to Shakespearian critics all that the possession of the much coveted folio itself could do. The price is apparently high for a work of the kind, £3, equivalent at present rates to about eighty dollars. As a fine copy of the original is worth about fifteen hundred dollars, the disproportion may not be so very great. There are now in private and public libraries in the United States at least twenty copies of this highest-priced of English books, the whole number of which in existence is probably under one hundred.

—The statistics of the newspaper press of Great Britain for the present year, show a total of 1,250 newspapers now existing, thus divided: England, 919; Wales, 27; Scotland, 160; Ireland, 140; British Isles, 14; of daily papers, 72 are published, two-thirds in England; Wales only supports a single daily paper, Scotland 9 and Ireland 14. These figures show an increase in ten years of one-half. The entire number of Magazines, including quarterly reviews, &c., is 537—of these 196 are of a decidedly religious character, leaving 341 to represent literature, science and art. Previous to the war, the number of newspapers in the United States was estimated at about 3,000.

—As a step in bibliographical progress may be noticed the first successful attempts at printing on vellum in this country. The earliest actual specimens executed were three copies of a rare Cromwellian tract, The Soldier's Pocket Bible—a little manual of Scripture texts, drawn up for the use of the Commonwealth Army, and reprinted by Mr. GEORGE LIVERMORE, from one of the two known copies that are extant. It consists of three of four leaves only. The vellum copies were printed by HARRISON, of Cambridge, at the well-known Riverside press. More recently, Prof. ALLEN, of the University of Pennsylvania, has issued two copies of his Life of Philidor in the printed on vellum, at the office of SPARKS & Co., of Philadelphia. It forms a post-octavo volume of some 200 pages, as is a considerable specimen of this elegant application of the typographic art. We have not heard how far these specimens have overcome the difficulties presented by the material; but both in England and France, all attempts at producing an article like the delicate soft vellum of a rich cream color, or ivory hue, employed by the Italian printers of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, have failed, and the secret of its manufacture may be considered one of the lost arts. Even the bibliographical enterprise of Dr. DUNAN failed before the difficulties of a vellum impression of any of his works. He commenced to print a single copy of his Typographical Antiquities of England in this style, but abandoned the attempt when a few sheets had been executed, and the unique copy of this specimen, as far as it was proceeded with, is now in the choice library of an amateur at Providence, R. I.

—Of all modern illustrated books, Messrs. HACHETTE's edition of Don Quixotte, with the designs of GUSTAVE DORE, is perhaps the most sumptuous. This artist, whom Dante, Wandering Jew, &c., have made known wherever art is recognized, is said to have spent two years in Spain, expressly to fit himself for the undertaking by the most careful studies of the national characteristics displayed by the country and its inhabitants. The work forms two noble folio volumes, and the illustrations, of various sizes and styles, are nearly five hundred in number. DORE's ideal of the hero of Cervantes and his Squire is objected to by some critics, as scarcely equal to the conception of the author; but all do justice to the boundless wealth of imagination displayed in the series of drawings. They form a complete romantic panorama of Spanish life and scenery, seen under the startling contrasts of light and shade, and characterized by the masterly handling of the artist. He has created a school of engravers, by his vigorous style of drawing, who now produce effects never yet deemed possible on wood, and which no other designer ever attempted. In mechanical execution the Don Quixotte is equal to the best English books, while the artistic talent exerted is far beyond anything that England has to show of a similar character. The high price of the work, which sells for about one hundred dollars, has not prevented the importation of a considerable number of copies, to supply the wants of our amateurs of fine books.

—The large sums now realized for works of art and choice books, have had the effect of bringing into the market many collections whose owners are content to realize at current prices. The recent auction sale of a library consigned from New-Orleans to Mr. J. CONTY's establishment in Broadway, resulted in higher rates for the illustrated books than any former experience could parallel. The same auctioneer is now preparing the catalogue of a library to be sold in the latter part of the present month, that from the splendid and magnificent array of choice books it presents, is certain to attract great attention. One of the lots is an original copy of AUDUBON's folio work on American Birds, now for a long time entirely out of the market, and in great demand for the public libraries of Europe.

—An interesting question connected with the laws of copyright is now under discussion in Germany. The time is approaching (November 9th, 1867) when the copyrights of the Works of GOETHE, SCHILLER, WIELAND, RICHTER and HERDER will expire, and of course, they will then become common property, open to the enterprise of any one. The representatives of Saxe Weimar, in the Germanic Diet, have proposed to lengthen the duration of the copyright privilege for ten years additional; but a majority of the States seem unwilling to grant this concession, and some of the members express their opinion that the protection already granted is sufficient, and that it is time the nation should enjoy the benefit arising from free competition in the productions of their classical authors. If the heirs of these great writers participated in the benefits of the proposed extension, it would be the most powerful argument in its favor; but this is not stated, and it is most likely that the great publishing house of Saxe Coburg, which has almost monopolized German classical literature, is the party most interested in the question.

—Mr. SCRIBNER will have ready, during the coming Spring, the first volume of Dr. LANGE's Theological and Homiletical Commentary on the New Testament, containing the Gospel of Matthew. The English translation is edited by Dr. PHILIP SCHAFF. The distinguished and extensive character of Dr. LANGE's work is so generally acknowledged, that it will probably supersede the existing New Testament commentaries, there being scarcely any one to compare with it in adaptation to the wants of the minister or theological student.

—By reference to the advertisement of the publishers, in another column, it will be seen that 5,000 copies of the exquisite poems of JEAN INGELOW have been sold in this country. When we consider that this poet was entirely unknown to fame when her volume was first published, this circulation must be considered not only very large, but as altogether due to the sterling merits of the volume itself.

Annual Commencement of Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

On Thursday the Academy of Music was crowded to its utmost extent with a most brilliant and fashionable audience to witness the third commencement of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College. Long before the hour of opening, the Academy was filled and hundreds were turned away unable to gain even standing-room. The President, in the presentation, paid a beautiful and feeling tribute to their worth and many good qualities. Prof. AUSTIN FLINT delivered the address to the graduates, congratulating them that they had finished their studies, and were now members of the profession, and assuring them that, though they were now to be separated sites so long a period of constant intercourse, the good wishes of the Faculty would always attend them. The remarks were listened to with great attention, and received with applause. The Valedictory was then delivered by WILLIAM T. LUSK, of the Graduating Class. It was a very able, thorough and scholarly production, and was very well received. A magnificent basket of flowers was sent him during his speech. Hon. SIDNEY DAVIES, President of the Board of Trustees, GEORGE F. TALLMAN, Esq., and Rev. DR. CHAPMAN, of the Board of Trustees, also made excellent speeches, which were received with much enthusiasm.

The Alumni of this and other medical colleges, and very many prominent citizens, were on the stage, and added dignity to the occasion.

INTERNATIONAL COURTESY.

The King of Italy has awarded the Cross of Commander of the Order of St. Maurice and Lazarus to Mr. BARNEY, Collector of the Port of New-York, and to Admiral PAULDING, of the Navy-yard, for the prompt assistance rendered by these gentlemen to the iron-clad frigate Re d'Italia, when she was grounded at Barnegat. Mr. BARNEY and Admiral PAULDING are the only Americans who have been knighted of the Order of Commander of St. Maurice and Lazarus.

THE MERRIMAC'S VICTIMS.

All efforts to raise the five war vessels, sunk at Norfolk, have ceased, rumor says, not to be resumed again. The Cumberland, which was struck by the Merrimac, cannot be raised under any circumstances. Three or four of the small vessels have been brought to the surface, but none of the large ones. $18,000 have been realized from the sale of materials taken from the wrecks.

Mission Stations.

For twenty-nine years the City Tract Society has been engaged in missionary effort in this City. As its name imports, it was primarily instituted for the purpose of promoting the interests of religion, chiefly by the circulation of tracts, and therefore it is often confounded with the American Tract Society. But the City Tract Society is not a publishing concern; it does not make nor sell books; it is really a missionary society; its agents go forth as tract-bearers into the tenement-houses, the hospital, the prison, the asylum, the immigrant depot, the military rendezvous and the ship, meeting every man as a brother, and with words of love and deeds of kindness, seeking to draw souls into the way of life. Simple in plan, unostentatious in appearance, it has unceasingly and steadily held on its way, increasing its means and instrumentalities, and extending its influence and adapting its system to the varying wants of its field of labor.

The migration of the churches from the lower part of the City, and the changes that have taken place in the character of the population, have gradually led to the establishment of what are called Mission Stations; and to show the nature and extent of the work as carried on in connection with these stations, and give some illustration of its practicability and success, and furnish reasons for a more liberal encouragement and a permanent endowment of it, is the design of this and of a few short articles which may follow.

In the neighborhood of the Battery, once the aristocratic quarter, we find warehouses and offices, and on the find blocks in Greenwich-street. Formerly inhabited by the Schermerhorns, and Bidgers and Bolltons, and such like names, we meet with the emigrant boarding-house and the tenement-house, crowded with men, women and children, each and all of these needing instruction and care, and control, if we would have them become useful members of society.

Many of the throngs that jostle us on the sidewalks are recent immigrants, and the law that guides us to references to our duty to them is found on the great statute book of the world, in these words: "The stranger that dwelleth with you shall be unto you as one born among you, and thou shalt love him as thyself, for ye were strangers in the land."

At No. 27 Greenwich street, on the second floor of a dwelling-house, we find a room, perhaps, 20 by 40 feet, plainly furnished, where 150 persons may be seated. Here the tract missionary gathers in on the Sabbath often as many as 200 children, when the place becomes so crowded no more can find admittance. Then, there is the regular preaching of the gospel, on the Sabbath, and through the week, and other services for old and young, held at various times.

Often the passer-by is attracted by the singing, and stealing in quietly, finds a seat, is made welcome, becomes interested, finds himself among friends, repeats his visit, and at length yields to the persuasive influences of the truth, and becomes a new man.

A few years ago a man was found on the Battery, in a wretched and well nigh hopeless condition, mentally and physically; he was gently and faithfully treated, and invited to the mission station. He came, and there received sympathy and encouragement. Doctor, which has not been easily down upon his soul, gave place to hope; he was respected as a man; self-scorn was stimulated. He was soon enabled to resume his place in society, and maintain himself and family in respectability and comfort.

When the tract visitor first met with him, he had already squandered in dissipation and folly $25,000; and the tract then gave him, entitled "Will you be Saved?" he has carefully preserved, and now has it framed, and hanging up in his room, as a memento of his experience.

His wife with wonder saw the evident change and beautifully testified gratitude, and soon accompanied her husband to the mission to see how such things were brought about, and there, verified the all she had learned, and continued of the right way, she united cordially with her companion in seeking true wisdom and following the word of God.

Since the establishment of this station, known as the First Ward Mission, in 1859, probably as many as 100 have given creditable evidence of being radically changed in heart and life, and regard that humble place as indissolubly connected with the commencement of their new and upward course. Of the hopeful converts at this mission, one has entered the City missionary service; two have been ordained as ministers of the gospel; two are licensed as preachers, and one is now pursuing a course of study, and for other is contemplating the same.

In the Fifth Ward, in Hope's mission room on the second floor of the store No. 147 Duane-street, which will hold about 200 persons. At this place a variety of services are maintained, both in English and German, for children and adults, and considerable numbers of all classes avail themselves of the privileges here afforded.

The colored people, so numerous in the Fifth Ward, have long been the objects of our regard, and meetings of interest have been carried on among them.

Opposite the City Prison, in the Sixth Ward, at No. 110 Centre-street, we are pleased to see a lightsomy, pleasant room: 22 by 60 feet, where faithful, laborious, self-denying men and women have toiled these many years to gather in, and reclaim, and save the wanderer and the lost.

Only recently, a man, greatly respected and beloved, who had toiled and laboured with great fidelity in the Sixth Ward, as the Tract Missionary for twenty-eight years, was called away to his rest and his reward.

In ten years, it appears from the records, 1,340 persons have been induced to attend the services in the Sixth Ward Mission; 2,000 children have been gathered into the Sabbath-school; 60 persons have been hopefully converted; one is preaching the Gospel, and one is now studying for the ministry.

The missionary and his coadjutors go forth as members of the Christian Church, and when they are at work, it is not so much the society that is engaged, as it is the church of which they are a part. We have not only to magnify the society; no claim, no originality for his mission; no desire for a place preference above or beyond others; as the Divine founder of Christianity went about doing good, we are trying to imitate His example. We wish all who bear the Christian name to unite with us, and participate in the ministry of Christianity, which is seen and felt by all men, to embody the beneficence and the living energy of Christ himself. There is work enough for all; we can give a field to every man, and woman, and child, where faithful exertion will be sure to reap his appropriate harvest.

The Twentieth Colored Regiment Ready to March.

The Twentieth Regiment United States Colored Volunteers, now quartered at Riker's Island, will embark to-morrow morning from this City on their way to the field. The regiment will march down Fifth-avenue, at 11 o'clock, to Fourteenth-street, down Fourteenth-street to Union-square, in front of the Union League Club House, where President KING, of Columbia College, will make the presentation address, which will be responded to by Col. M. B. BANKER. An address from the ladies, written on parchment by HARRY T. TRUESDALE, will be presented with the colors, which are of the most costly description. Invitations have been extended to Major-Gen. DIX, Major-Gens. HANCOCK, BURNSIDE, ARBERSON, SEARMAN, Gen. JACKSON, and a large number of other military men, who will be present. A full band of forty pieces from Governor's Island has been chosen to furnish the music. This is one of the finest bands in the army. After receiving the colors and partaking of a lunch, the regiment will march down Broadway at 2 P. M., to the foot of Canal-street, where they will embark in the steamer Arizona, to report to Gen. BANKS at New-Orleans. The regiment will be in full marching order, with knapsacks, muskets, white gloves, &c. Their discipline and soldierly bearing are described as highly commendable. The Twentieth Regiment was organized under the auspices of the Union League, and is the second colored regiment that patriotic body has assisted to take the field.

Gen. Dix and Beauty Brokers.

Gen. Dix has within the last few days had a great number of Beauty Brokers arrested, and has either forced them to disgorge or send them to Fort Lafayette. On Thursday he collected from them $1,200, and yesterday about the same amount. He is determined if possible to break up this swindling business, and the brokers finding they cannot keep the money, are getting tired of it.

Torn and Shattered by a Shell.

ALFRED KRETZLER, of Company D, One Hundred and Sixty-second New-York Regiment, who resides at No. 24 Downing-street, in this City, is a fine looking intelligent youth, some twenty-two years of age. At Port Hudson he suffered frightful injuries, and his escape from death was marvelous. A shell burst near him, took off his right leg near the thigh, his right arm above the elbow, broke his jaw and carried away the flesh under it, tore of the flesh of the left thigh, and broke the forearm of the left hand. From these injuries he recovered, and has been supplied by Surgeon MCDOUGAL, Medical Director of the Department of the East, with an artificial arm and hand, and will be with a leg so neat at the stump will bear it. This young man is but a week of his former self, and, of course, unable to resume his trade. He was a member of Hook and Ladder Company No. 6, and the company hasten to give a ball for his benefit, on the 1st of April, at Irving Hall. There are legs, and, certainly, with the fingers of young KRETZLER's case known to them, who will not scarcely and the generous purpose of No. 6.

Annual Report of the Commissioners of Emigration.

The Commissioners of Emigration have sent in to the Legislature their annual report, showing the number of persons landed at this port during the year 1863 to be 194,377. Of these, 87,403 were citizens not subject to bonds, and 106,944 aliens, for whom commutation was paid, or bonds executed, being an increase in alien emigrants of 30,628 over 1862, 31,218 over 1861, 41,683 over 1860, 77,303 over 1859, 78,268 over 1858, and 30,229 less than in 1857; while the addition to the average of former years, since 1847, is 3,665 less.

Of the emigrants, 69,157 were from Ireland, 35,608 from Germany, 18,797 from England, and 16,038 from other countries. Total number cared for at the State Emigrant Refuge and Hospital, 4,011. There were provided for 132 lunatics; 50 cases of small-pox; 111 persons sent back to Europe at their own request; 49 people sent to St. Vincent's and New-York Hospitals; 674 persons buried; 12,832 persons found situations; $19,166 60 were received in repay for letters written from the Emigrant Landing Depot, for recently arrived emigrants, and against so their forwarding; and $26,976 82 was received at Emigrant Landing Depot in anticipation of arrival of emigrants.

The whole product of the land under cultivation at the State Emigrant Refuge and Hospital, Ward's Island, (about 50 acres,) including milk, vegetables, &c., is consumed by the inmates, and it is estimated that if purchased, it would cost about $8,710 18.

The net cost for the support of the Emigrant Hospital and Refuge was $97,566 14.

The small number of emigrant patients during the autumn of 1863, but several of the hospital buildings vacated.

Great circumstance attended to the Commissioners the gratification of rescuing a large number of sailors of the Russian squadron, then in this port, who were suffering under misery and other disorders. This was done under an arrangement with the Consul-General of Russia and the Admiral. The number amounted at times to 150, during the months of September, October and November.

In the Emigrant Hospital, the number of patients treated was 3,125, of which 888 were discharged cured, and 19 died, showing a proportion of deaths of about 1-14 per cent.

The number of steerages landing passengers at Castle Garden has increased from 24,000 passengers, in 1860, to 170, bringing 30,000, in 1863. The average number brought by steamers was considerably greater than by sailing vessels. 24,108 passengers reported their intended destination to be the State of New-York; 12,136 to Pennsylvania and New-Jersey; 17,516 to New-England; 4,423 to the Southern States; 38,179 to Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, and California; and 2,261 to Kansas, Nebraska, Canada, &c.

The total revenue of the commission in 1863 was $355,791, including $212,000 for commutation money, $500 for licenses to emigrant runners.

The expenditures amount to $288,166 71, embracing $164,050 invested in United States stocks, $1,350 salary of counsel to the Board, $26,607 30 expenses of Castle Garden depot, $36

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Gen. KILPATRICK has been heard from. Gen. BURNSIDE telegraphs from Fortress Monroe to the President that the expedition has reached our lines after penetrating the suburbs or outer fortifications of Richmond, and losing 150 men in skirmishes. Among the missing are Cols. DAHLGREN, COOK and LITCHFIELD, the two former supposed to be prisoners. KILPATRICK is said to have destroyed a large portion of the Virginia Central Railroad, several mills along the James River, and other valuable property. But that kind of work will scarcely seem a sufficient motive to the public for the splendid gallop, and curiosity is still keenly felt for an explanation.

The telegraph, this morning, presents a number of dispatches from Cairo respecting Gen. SHERMAN's expedition, all of which are stale and very empty. Rebel reports, already published, of his occupation of Meridian, are later, and certainly more lucid. It begins to be believed that Gen. SHERMAN is on his way back to Vicksburgh, if he have not already reached there—such a course being necessary, because of the failure of SMITH's cavalry column to cooperate with him. A Washington dispatch, published elsewhere, is confirmatory of this theory.

The small side-wheel steamer Scotia arrived on Thursday at Fortress Monroe, having been captured running the blockade out of Wilmington. The gunboat Connecticut made her a prize. Her cargo consisted of 108 bales of cotton.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer, writing from Norfolk, Va., on the 2d inst., says that the rebels were threatening that City. A fight had taken place on the 1st, at Deep Creek, ten miles from Norfolk, but the result had not been ascertained, and heavy artillery firing was going on at the time the correspondent closed his dispatch. The rebels seemed to be infesting the Dismal Swamp Canal in large numbers, and a party endeavoring to make their way to Roanoke Island were compelled to turn back. A Lieutenant and fifteen men of the Fifth Pennsylvania Cavalry were captured while reconnoitering in the swamp. The precise object of the rebels in these demonstrations is not very clear.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday, a report from the Secretary of War was presented, giving information respecting the arrest, imprisonment and subsequent discharge of soldiers of the Ninth Minnesota Regiment by the Missouri authorities. A bill, introduced by Mr. NESMITH, granting lands in aid of the construction of a military railroad and telegraph line in Oregon, was referred to the Committee on Public Lands. Mr. POMEROY presented the joint resolution of the Kansas Legislature favoring the donation of money and lands to aid the construction of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad. Mr. SHERMAN made a statement respecting the disagreement of the Committee of Conference of both Houses on the Revenue Bill, and said that inasmuch as the disagreement seemed irreconcilable, the Committee on the part of the Senate would recommend, in order to prevent the failure of the bill, that the Senate recede from its amendments. A vote was then taken on the recommendation, which was adopted by 25 against 11. Mr. BROWN called up his bill directing an additional classified census of the population and resources of certain portions of the country, but the passage of the measure was opposed by Mr. GRIMES, and it was referred to the Finance Committee. The special order concerning the interference of the military in elections was called up, and Mr. POWELL resumed his speech in favor of the bill, occupying the time until the hour of adjournment.

In the House, a bill was introduced by Mr. ALLEY, authorizing a postal mail steamship service between the United States and Brazil. A resolution of thanks to the twelve surviving revolutionary soldiers for their services in the war for independence, was passed. The Massachusetts contested election case between Messrs. STEVENS and HOOPER was considered, and resulted in a resolution in favor of Mr. HOOPER. A memorial was presented from the Legislature of Minnesota asking the establishment of a semi-weekly mail route from St. Cloud, Min., to Fort Walla Walla, Washington Territory.

GENERAL NEWS.

Mayor GUNNISON has vetoed a resolution of the Common Council authorizing the lease of the upper part of a building in Nassau-street, owned by FERNANDO WOOD, for a District Court, on the ground that the floor as well as the room is too high,—that the locality of the building is bad for the purpose, that public proprietc ought to have been invited, and that he knows from personal knowledge that "better quarters than those proposed can be had for less than half the money." The lease was to be for ten years at $5,000 a year.

It is reported that the liberal benefactor of Yale College, who has just given $60,000 for the erection of a new College building, to be used as a dormitory and study, is A. T. STEWART, of this City. The officers of the College do not yet make public the name, doubtless for some good reason of their own, but common report gives the credit of the munificent gift to Mr. STEWART.

It was a caucus of the Union members of the Ohio Legislature, at Columbus, on Friday night last, and not a general meeting of Union men, as the telegraph reported, that unanimously demanded Mr. LINCOLN's renomination. The proceedings were spirited and enthusiastic.

Still another donation is said to have been made to Yale College. Mr. C. S. BUSHNELL, of New-Haven, has presented the Divinity School with $5,000.

Galignani, of Feb. 17, states that the Emperor on the day previous received a letter addressed to him by Queen VICTORIA, notifying the birth of the son of the Prince and Princess of Wales.

Business in Flour was quite brisk yesterday; shipping brands advanced highly. Wheat was dearer but less active. Corn, Oats and Barley were in fair demand, as were also Hay, Hops, Metals, Fruit, Seeds, Groceries, Tallow, Tobacco, Linseed Oil, Petroleum, Pork, Sugar, Molasses, Rosin and Turpentine. Cotton was dull. Whiskey was heavy and declining. Jobbers report rather more animation in domestic Dry Goods, without any remarkable changes in prices. Private transactions in imported goods have been checked by the numerous auction sales which passed off spiritedly. Heavier freight engagements were reported at firmer rates.

The price of Gold was firm, yesterday, at 161@161½ per cent. Exchange on London was not relatively so stiffen. Money easy. Stocks very much excited on the Coal and Railway Shares, and ½ per cent. higher on the Popular Loan, which sold at 107¾ per cent.

The Louisiana Election—Secessionism and Copperheadism Spurned.

The first application of the President's plan of restoring the Union has been grandly successful. Through it Louisiana has been brought completely back, and that State is to-day under a civil rule as loyal as that of New-York itself, and many would say even more so. The State officers, which have been elected by a large majority, are most earnest supporters not only of the Government, but of the administration of the Government, and can be implicitly relied upon, whatever be the effort or the sacrifice demanded.

We confess ourselves surprised, both at the magnitude of the vote, and the comparatively small number received by Mr. FELLOWS, the Copperhead candidate for Governor. Before the "secession," the voluntarily polled in the elections of Louisiana was from thirty-five to forty thousand; never, we believe, beyond forty-five thousand. Considering the large numbers (almost all voters) who went at an early day into the rebel army, and also the fact that there are extensive districts in the State which are still under rebel duress, it is surprising that nearly eleven thousand ballots, or more than one-fourth of the regular vote of the State, have been cast on this occasion—and all by citizens who have taken a very stringent oath of allegiance. This election, it must be borne in mind, was confined exclusively to residents, who had the franchise under the State laws. The extent of the response is remarkable; but more remarkable yet in its character.

Of the entire number of votes given, less than one-fifth were received by the Copperhead candidate. No loyal Northern State can show any such preponderance on the side of staunch Unionism. It is particularly gratifying, too, to note in the returns that between New-Orleans and the country parishes there is no essential difference in this respect. If anything, the planting population has polled a stronger vote, comparatively, against FELLOWS, than the city population. This indicates an extraordinary readiness in those who have the most at stake to accept the new order of things; for it was universally understood that the election of HAHN would be equivalent to the conversion of Louisiana into a Free State. He had identified himself completely with the Free-State movement, and one of his first official duties will be to make arrangements for the convention to be held in April, to frame a Free-State Constitution.

One would naturally say that if Copperheadism would flourish anywhere, it would be in those States which have been reclaimed from the rebellion—supposing the Copperhead theory to be correct that those States are "subjugated." Subjugation necessarily produces humiliation and bitterest animosity. Though the "subjugated" may not be able to vent their hate in open violence, yet they are sure to do so by every means in their power. If they were called upon to vote—a strange call, by the way, to be made upon a "subjugated" people—they would make it a special point to cast their ballots for men particularly obnoxious to the power which brought them under the yoke. There could possibly be no condition more favorable to the development of Copperheadism of the intensest malignity; and yet to-day there is, as the votes prove, less Copperheadism in New Orleans than in any Northern city—in Louisiana than in any Northern State. All the predictions of the Northern Copperheads that the "unconstitutionality" of the emancipation policy of President LINCOLN, and the "tyranny" of the military administration of General BUTLER and Gen. BANKS, would crush out the last vestige of Union feeling, and make every Louisianian and his children eternal enemies of the Government, have their practical answer in this record, that four-fifths of the voters of Louisiana, who can get to the ballot-box at all, have voted for the most thorough-going supporters of the Government. It all proves that the Louisianians themselves feel that the Government has only vindicated its legitimate authority in a legitimate way, and that the policy it has pursued has been in a line with their own best interests. As a people, they are as intelligent and as proud as any—as quick as any to perceive wrong, as sure as any to resent it. Yet to-day, as they have just shown, they are tenfold more ready to support the Administration than are the Northern men who have for the last two years been reviling the Administration without stint for its mismanagement of the Southwestern Department. Surely the result of this election would carry shame and confusion to these Northern Copperheads, if anything could. But this is not possible. The Copperheadism which has hardly shown life in this Louisiana election, will be just as rampant as ever in the next Northern election which occurs. New-Hampshire will cast, next Tuesday, twice as many votes proportionately for the man to be its Governor, who declared that he "hoped to Heaven that every New-Hampshire soldier who crossed the Potomac would come back in a box," as Louisiana has cast for its gubernatorial candidate who was the exponent of the same feeling.

This result in Louisiana will soon be followed by similar ones in Tennessee and Arkansas. All accounts betoken that the Unionism which is reasserting itself in those States is of the same sterling cast. It will give no aid or comfort to Copperheadism of any type. It has formally spurned and felt the infernal malignity of the rebellion, and in putting its heel upon that, it cannot, by any [illegible] sympathy therewith.

The Stoppage of the Steam-Rams.

The Tory party in England is trying very hard to excite a popular feeling against Earl RUSSELL and the Government by charging them with having yielded to menaces from the United States. The special instance in which this offence against British pride was committed, according to the statement of Lord DERBY, who leads the attack, was in the decision to stop the departure of the iron-clad steam-rams which were in process of construction at Birkenhead. On the 1st of September, it seems, according to Lord DERBY's statement, Earl RUSSELL informed Mr. ADAMS that there was no evidence sufficient to satisfy the British Government that these vessels were intended for the Confederate service, and that they could not, therefore, interfere to prevent their departure; whereas, on the 8th, he writes to inform him that "instructions have been issued to prevent their departure." As some of our own journals, sharing apparently the Tory sympathy with the rebel cause, have echoed these accusations, and have still further joined that party in attacks upon Mr. SEWARD for his action in the matter, it may be of service to rehearse the facts of the case.

On the 10th of July Mr. ADAMS wrote to Mr. SEWARD calling his attention to the iron-clad vessel then nearly completed and evidently intended for the rebel service, saying he should at once lay the matter before the British Government for solemn remonstrance. On the 11th Mr. ADAMS wrote to Lord RUSSELL, rehearsing the various instances in which the British Government had permitted war vessels to leave British ports to prey upon American commerce, and calling his special attention to the vessel in question. The very construction of such a vessel, Mr. ADAMS said, in time of peace, was calculated to excite uneasiness. "But," he adds, "when it further appears that it is constructed by parties who have been already proved to have furnished one vessel of war to the insurgents in America, and who are now shown to be acting in cooperation with their well-known agents on the spot in the preparation of that now in question, it is not unnatural that such proceedings should be regarded by the Government and people of the United States with the greatest alarm, as virtually tantamount to a participation in the war by the people of Great Britain to a degree, which, if not seasonably prevented, cannot fail to endanger the peace and welfare of both countries."

Lord RUSSELL acknowledged the receipt of this letter on the 12th, and promised that such steps should be taken in the matter as could be "legally and properly adopted." On the 16th Mr. ADAMS wrote again to Lord RUSSELL, sending him additional proof that the vessel was being built under the immediate supervision of Capt. J. D. BULLOCH, the well-known agent of the rebel Confederacy. Meantime, in Parliament, on the 22d of July, Lord PALMERSTON stated that he had understood the vessel was intended for the French Government, and was being built under supervision of a Mr. BRAYAY, a Frenchman, who was the agent of the French Emperor in the matter; whereupon Mr. ADAMS sent to Lord RUSSELL the most conclusive evidence that this was a false pretence; that Mr. BRAYAY was utterly unknown to the French Government, which, moreover, had nothing whatever to do with the vessel. Mr. ADAMS continued from time to time to furnish Lord RUSSELL with testimony in regard to the destination of these vessels, and to represent to him, in the strongest terms, "the uneasiness and anxiety created in the different ports of the United States by the idea that instruments of injury of so formidable a character continue to threaten their safety, as issuing from the ports of Great Britain, a country with which the people of the United States are at peace." On the 4th of September he sent further proof of preparations making for the immediate departure of the vessel, and took occasion to record, in the name of his Government, his "last solemn protest against the commission of such an act of hostility against a friendly nation." On the same day he received from Lord RUSSELL a letter dated Sept. 1st, in which he gave the following as the conclusions to which the Government had arrived upon the subject:

"In the first place Her Majesty's Government are advised that the information contained in the depositions is in a great measure mere hearsay evidence, and generally that it is not such as to show the intent or purpose necessary to make the building or fitting out of these vessels illegal under the Foreign Enlistment Act.

Secondly, it has been stated to Her Majesty's Government, at one time, that these vessels have been built for Frenchmen, and at another that they belonged to the Viceroy of Egypt, and that they were not intended for the so-called Confederate States. It is true, that in your letter of the 25th of July you maintain that this statement as regards French ownership is a pretence, but the inquiries set on foot by Her Majesty's Government have failed to show that it is without foundation. Whatever suspicion may be entertained by the United States Consul at Liverpool as to the ultimate destination of these vessels, the fact remains that Mr. BRAYAY, a French merchant residing at Paris, who is represented to be the person upon whose orders these ships have been built, has personally appeared and has acted in that character at Liverpool. There is no legal evidence against Mr. BRAYAY's claim, nor anything to affect him with any illegal act or purpose, and the responsible agent of the customs at Liverpool affirms his belief that these vessels have not been built for the Confederates.

Under these circumstances, and having regard to the entire insufficiency of the depositions to prove any infraction of the law, Her Majesty's Government are advised that they cannot interfere in any way with these vessels."

Mr. ADAMS, in transmitting this letter on the 4th, to Mr. SEWARD, said that "it seemed to put an end to all doubt" as to the action of the British Government. But, on the same day, he received a note from Lord RUSSELL acknowledging the receipt of the additional evidence Mr. ADAMS had sent him, (which was more purely "hearsay" than anything previously submitted,) and saying that "the matter was under the serious and anxious consideration of Her Majesty's Government." On the 6th of September Lord RUSSELL sent the receipt of this note, Mr. ADAMS had sent to Lord RUSSELL the following reply, to what he had regarded as the "final decision" of the British Government:

MR. ADAMS TO EARL RUSSELL.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
LONDON, Sept. 5, 1863.

MY LORD: At this moment, when one of the iron-clad vessels is on the point of departure from this kingdom, on its hostile errand against the United States, I am honored with the reply of your Lordship to my notes of the 11th, 16th and 25th of July, and of the 14th of August. I trust I need not express how profound is my regret at the conclusion to which Her Majesty's Government have arrived. I can regard it no otherwise than as practically opening to the insurgents free liberty in this Kingdom to execute a policy described in one of their late publications in the following language:

"In the present state of the harbor defences of New-York, Boston, Portland, and smaller northern cities, such a vessel as the Warrior would have little difficulty in entering any of these ports and inflicting a vital blow upon the enemy. The destruction of Boston alone would be worth a hundred victories in the field. It would bring such a terror to the 'blue noses,' as to cause them to wish earnestly for peace, despite their overweening love of gain, which has been so freely administered to since the opening of this war. Vessels of the Warrior class would promptly raise the blockade of our ports, and would even, in this respect, confer advantages which would soon repay the cost of their construction."

It would be superfluous in me to point out to your Lordship that this is war. No matter what may be the theory adopted of neutrality in a struggle, when this process is carried on in the manner indicated, from a territory and with the aid of the subjects of a third party, that third party, to all intents and purposes, ceases to be neutral. Neither is it necessary to show, that any Government which suffers it to be done fails in enforcing the essential conditions of international duty toward the country against whom the hostility is directed. It is my belief it is impossible that any nation, retaining a proper degree of self-respect, could tamely submit to a continuance of relations so utterly deficient in reciprocity. I have no idea that Great Britain would do so for a moment.

After a careful examination of the full instructions with which I have been furnished, in preparation for such an emergency, I deem it inexpedient for me to attempt any recurrence to arguments for effective interposition in the present case. Under these circumstances, I prefer to desist from communicating to your Lordship any such further portions of my existing instructions as are united to this case, lest I should contribute to aggravate difficulties already too serious. I therefore content myself with informing your Lordship that I transmit, by the present steamer, a copy of your note for the consideration of my Government, and shall await the more specific directions that will be contained in the reply.

I pray your Lordship to accept the assurances of the highest consideration with which I have the honor to be, my Lord, your most obedient servant,

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS.

On the 8th of September, Lord RUSSELL sent to Mr. ADAMS the following note:

EARL RUSSELL TO MR. ADAMS.

FOREIGN OFFICE, Sept. 8, 1863.

Lord RUSSELL presents his compliments to Mr. ADAMS, and has the honor to inform him that instructions have been issued which will prevent the departure of the two iron-clad vessels from Liverpool.

These are the general facts upon which Lord DERBY rallied to show that Earl RUSSELL had yielded to menaces, and under the influence of Mr. ADAMS' letter of Sept. 5, had changed the purpose announced in his letter of the 1st, which was not to interfere in any way with the vessels. Lord RUSSELL replied by saying that the decision to stop the rams was made on the 3d, but that it was still the subject of correspondence between the Foreign Office and the Treasury Department, he himself being in Scotland, and that this is the reason why it was not announced to Mr. ADAMS until the 8th. On the 11th, Lord RUSSELL wrote to Mr. ADAMS a very full reply to his note of the 5th, in which he made an elaborate vindication of the action of the British Government, and protested its most earnest desire faithfully to perform the duties of neutrality. On the 16th Mr. ADAMS responded, at still greater length, reiterating and enforcing, with increased emphasis and force, the views he had previously presented.

This is the whole case, so far as the action of the Government in regard to the steam-rams is concerned.

Presidential.

We find the following paragraph in the Washington correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial:

"An interesting correspondence has taken place between Secretary CHASE and President LINCOLN on the subject of the Pomeroy circular. Some days since, Mr. CHASE sent a note to the President, saying he had not seen the Pomeroy circular until published, and that he disapproved of it; but, nevertheless, at the solicitation of friends, he stood in the attitude of a candidate for the Presidency, and he submitted to Mr. LINCOLN the question whether such an attitude was incompatible with his relations as a member of the Cabinet.

The President replied that he had not seen Mr. POMEROY's circular at all, and, as to whether Mr. Chase's candidacy was incompatible with his position as a member of the Cabinet, that was a question for him (Chase) to decide."

Whether any such correspondence has taken place or not we have no means of knowing beyond the general reliability of the journal in which the statement appears. There is nothing improbable in it. It would be quite natural for Mr. CHASE to make the inquiry, and Mr. LINCOLN's reply is certainly very pertinent and just. If Mr. CHASE intends, by being a candidate, to put himself in an attitude of quasi hostility to the President—if he intends to use the public patronage which his position as a member of the Cabinet by appointment of Mr. LINCOLN enables him to control, for his own advancement against the President, or if he permits it to be understood that he enters the canvass as the advocate of a policy different from that of Mr. LINCOLN's Administration, then it is clear that his candidacy is "incompatible with his position as a member of the Cabinet," and Mr. LINCOLN may safely rely on Mr. CHASE's sagacity and delicacy to find it out. But if the choice between them turns wholly on personal considerations, and Mr. CHASE does not permit himself, either by the acts of office-holders under him, or by dissent from the policy of the Administration of which he forms a part, to be put in an attitude of opposition to it, there can be no harm or indelicacy in his remaining a member of Mr. LINCOLN's Cabinet.

Meantime, it is pretty well understood that some of those who are nominally for Mr. CHASE as against the President, are really working for the nomination of another candidate, upon the assumption that he intends to run whether put in nomination by the Union Convention or not.

GEN. MCCLELLAN'S REPORT.—We continue on the second page of this sheet our review of Gen. McCLELLAN's history of his own military career. The present article relates to the order given in February, 1862, for a general advance of the whole army.

The Recent Military Expeditions.

For some weeks, and especially for some days past, the news from the various military expeditions, and their fields of operation, has been perplexingly obscure. The whereabouts of SHERMAN's twenty thousand, and their destination—the fortunes or misfortunes of SMITH's ten thousand cavalry—the purposes and prospects of KILPATRICK's gallopade—have been problems of the most profound and absorbing interest, and only inferior in immediate importance to these were the questions of LONGSTREET's location, of the significance of GRANT's demonstrations from Chattanooga, and of the prospect of a cooperative movement against Mobile from New-Orleans. Beside all these, we were held in suspense for a day or two as to the character and extent of our disaster in Florida.

Some of these matters are now partially, and others wholly, cleared up. SHERMAN, if we may judge by our latest rebel advices, which are up to about the close of last month, is now back at Vicksburgh, as they reported him a few days ago to be pushing his way there. Whatever object may have been in view in the movement of his columns over the vast spaces he traveled—from Chattanooga to Memphis, from Memphis to Vicksburgh, from Vicksburgh to Meridian and probably to Selma—it would seem that that object had been baulked. If the purpose were to move upon Mobile, then we judge there was a double failure—for, in the first place, SMITH's cavalry force, (without the aid of which the movement of such an infantry force as that of SHERMAN through such a region as he had to traverse was impossible,) failed to effect a junction; and, in the second place, SHERMAN could have no intention of attacking Mobile with the body of troops and the military implements he had in hand, unless he were supported by a cooperating army and navy in front of the city, and no show of such cooperation was ever made by Gen. BANKS, though a show of it was made by Admiral FARRAGUT. If, again, SHERMAN intended by a stupendous flank movement to compel a retreat of JOE JOHNSTON's army, that also was unsuccessful; and in fact it seems to have failed so far as effecting any great visible object was concerned, unless we credit the not very credible theory that Gen. GRANT meant in some way or other to effect the just-effected retreat of LONGSTREET by introducing general confusion and panic throughout the Southwest. At all events, and whatever may have been the object of the expedition, we infer from the rebel dispatches and from the circumstances of the case that SHERMAN is no longer on the offensive; and though the telegrams sent us concerning him this morning are both stale and stupid, we should not be astonished to learn by-and-by that the opening of this month had found him in Vicksburgh.

SMITH's cavalry column, also, about which there has been so much anxiety, and on the successful union with which the fortunes of SHERMAN's expedition so largely depended, has now returned to Memphis, having been driven back to the point from which it started by the rebel cavalry who gathered from all points against it. The public have been told of SMITH's great success, in that he destroyed so many bushels of rebel grain and tore up so many rebel rails; but to assign this as the object of his expedition is an insult to common sense. SMITH failed.

We have given during the last day or two such details as have come to hand of the very latest rush on to Richmond. We have not yet full statements of movements, purposes and results, but we judge that KILPATRICK and his men had a glorious ride from the Rapidan into the very suburbs of Richmond, and we are only sorry that having got so very close to the person of JEFF. DAVIS, he did not get just a little closer, seize the traitor by the hair, fling him on behind, and give him a ride to Washington on the hero's rump. When we know exactly and really what KILPATRICK intended to do, we shall be able to judge more accurately whether he accomplished it.

Beside the light we have got on these three great expeditions, we think it may be taken for granted now that LONGSTREET is out of East Tennessee, where he has been hovering for the last four months, threatening Knoxville and making himself obnoxious generally. If he be not permitted to come back, this may be accounted one of the most important successes of late days, for he cannot plant his force in any other position where it will count for as much as it did in East Tennessee.

GRANT's late demonstrations from Chattanooga appear now to have been but demonstrations, and the letters of our correspondent this morning furnish the first intelligible details of them. Had SMITH and SHERMAN succeeded, we think it altogether likely that GRANT would have carried his demonstrations much farther than he did.

If all these various movements have thus, as would seem, come to an end, it may be said that we have now everywhere quiet once more. As every one knew, it was hardly yet the time to send the general cry of battle along the lines. But the day will soon come.

REBEL PRISONERS.—The Government has appointed a commission to visit all camps where rebels prisoners are confined, and administer to them the oath of allegiance under the Amnesty Proclamation. There will not be any very general rush on the part of these prisoners to avail themselves of the benefits of the amnesty; but if even one in ten of all the rebels in our hands take the oath, it will diminish the army of JEFF. DAVIS by at least four thousand men, or about ten of the average rebel regiments. At a recent visit to a camp of five thousand rebel prisoners, we were informed by the Commandant of the post that over a thousand of them had expressed their anxiety to join our navy. And it may be found that even as large a proportion as this, one-fifth, will come forward from all the camps.

We trust the commission will investigate as closely as possible the sincerity of the prisoners whom they propose to discharge after taking the oath. The rebel opinion with respect to the binding character of an oath is a very loose one, and there are many in captivity who would take twenty oaths of allegiance, and then quickly make their way South to join the ranks of treason. We have a great advantage just now over the rebels in the number of prisoners we hold; but it is not safe to cheapen the stock.

We think it an excellent sign that so many of them are anxious to join the navy; and we think this an excellent disposition to make of those who take the oath. If properly distributed, and kept for a time under proper surveillance, no danger need be feared from them in the naval service. We suppose their preference for this branch of the service is to be attributed to the fact that they are less likely to be caught and executed as deserters by JEFF DAVIS; and perhaps also somewhat to their unwillingness to fight against their old companions in arms.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The performance of "Lucrecia Borgia" last night was in all respects admirable. We have nothing to say beyond this.

To-day, for the first time, "Faust" will be given as a matinée performance. The role of Marguerite will be sustained by Mlle. VERGNET, formerly of the German opera. This change in the cast is rendered necessary by the continued indisposition of Miss KELLOGG.

IRVING HALL.—Mr. L. F. HARRISON's grand Testimonial Concert will take place here to-night. No entertainment of the season can be more deserving of the patronage of an American audience. Mr. HARRISON, during the period of his career as a caterer for the public, has done more for young artists than all the other managers in the City. He has given every one a chance, and from these chances many an artist owes, or will owe, his, or her, career in the future. Apart from this fact, the programme offers peculiar inducements to the public. The programme is one of the best ever placed before our concert goers. We give it:—1. Overture to "William Tell," by the full orchestra; 2. Solo, by Mr. MEURZ; 3. Italian Ballad, by Signor MARCHESI; 4. Fantasia for violin, by Mr. BERNE WOLLENHAUPT; 5. Grand chorus from "Faust," by the members of the Liederkranz, Arion and New-York Singing Societies. Second part—1. Introduction to the "Bourgeois Gentilhomme," by CHAS. FRANCI, (first time;) 2. Grand aria by Miss MARSON; 3. Grand Concerto in B minor, by Gottschalk, performed by Mr. J. R. MILLS; 4. Duet from "Poliuto," by Mme. MARSON and Signor MARCHESI; 5. Overture to "Ring Bina." Such a programme needs no words of commendation.

NIBLO'S SALOON.—Mr. GOTTSCHALK will give a grand matinée here to-day.

BROADWAY CIRCUS.—Performances are announced at the Broadway Amphitheatre to-day, (Saturday,) both for afternoon and evening, and all the attractions of the establishment will be brought forward on each occasion, affording a display of equestrian, gymnastic and zoological wonders which cannot fail to amuse and gratify young and old. Rides and acrobatic, dancing and trick horses, learned ponies, an educated bull, a trained buffalo, and performing dogs and monkeys are all comprised in the bill of fare.

EXTENSION OF THE THIRD-AVENUE RAILROAD.—The Third-avenue Railroad is about to be further extended; and although, through its efficient President, WM. A. DARLING, Esq., it has been working most effectually for years from the Astor House to Harlem River, yet the Company, we understand, intend to have it extended through Thirty-fourth-street to the East River, and from the Third-avenue through Fifty-sixth-street to the east side of Fifth-avenue, and from Chatham-street through Chambers-street to the east side of Broadway; and this extension will be operated on without any extra or additional fare. Mr. DARLING, the President, and the other members of the Company are confident of this extension proving a perfect success.

TO TAX-PAYERS.—We are requested to call attention to a notice of the Assessor of the United States Internal Revenue in the various districts of this City and Brooklyn, published in another column. It will be seen that a failure to make returns before the first Monday in May will subject the delinquent to having fifty per cent. added to his valuation.

EXHIBITION OF THE EUCLEIAN SOCIETY.—The Literary Exhibition of the Eucleian Society of the N. Y. University, held last evening at Niblo's Saloon, was largely attended, many not being able to obtain admittance. The speeches were all good, having the merit of brevity. The oration, by W. F. MORGAN, subject, "Our Literary Future," was exceedingly well delivered, and merited the beautiful floral basket and the enthusiastic applause with which it was received. "Patriotism," by E. F. PARSONS, was well spoken. "Our National Emblem," by E. J. MORGAN, was well received. The poem, by Mr. CONWAY, full of wit and pleasant satire, obtained frequent applause. The music, under the directing of HEINZEMEIER, was given with usual excellence. Altogether, one of the most enjoyable and successful of the merit of the society embodied in its motto, "Always to the Right."

Card from the New-York Piano-forte MANUFACTURERS' SOCIETY.—The card headed "Correction," published by the Journeymen Piano-makers' Association, contains so many erroneous statements, that, in justice to ourselves, and for the sake of truth, we feel compelled to lay the facts before the public.

In the solid card the idea is conveyed that the advance of 15 per cent. given to them last October was the only one the workmen had then received, while the facts of the case are these: In March last the Piano manufacturers advanced the wages of their workmen 20 per cent. on the original prices, and in October following the workmen again demanded an advance of 25 per cent. on the already advanced rates. It was absolutely impossible for the manufacturers to accede to this, as it would have raised the prices of New-York pianos to finish above those manufactured in other cities (where no advance whatever had as yet been made,) as to prove highly detrimental to our customers and our business. We therefore agreed to give 15 per cent., (making a total advance of 35½ per cent. on original prices,) at the same time signifying our willingness to grant the additional 10 per cent. or more as the state of the business warranted it, and prices of pianos could be raised accordingly. Up to the present time the state of the business has not justified an increase in the prices of pianos and consequent gain in the rate of wages, which first was communicated by us to the workmen, in answer to their first and only demand for the 10 per cent., to which we received an answer as follows: That, "unless their demand for 10 per cent. advance was immediately complied with, they would, on the following morning, strike for 25 per cent. and upward," which they did, by all leaving our factories and refusing to work.

Finding they could not have a compliance in that way, they have since attempted to take us by detail, ordering all men back to work at old prices, or all but two establishments, on condition that the men working should pay 25 per cent. of their earnings for the support of those striking for an advance of 25 per cent. at the said two factories.

In consequence of this outrageous and unjust proceeding, we all retired to close our respective factories.

In conclusion, we deem it our duty to inform the public that the highest wages ever paid at all our establishments exceed $3 a day per man.

BROADWAY, CORNER OF GRAND.

EXTRACT FROM DR. HAZARD'S LETTER TO THE EDITOR OF THE PROVIDENCE JOURNAL OF DEC. 31, 1863.—"I offer for the consideration of the public the following recipe, which, after some twelve or fifteen years' experience, I have ever found effectual in expelling from the human system, within the space of a few hours, the morbid matter which is probably the primary cause of most of the diseases that afflict mankind:

As soon as practicable after the symptoms of disease decidedly appear, such as dizziness, pain in the head, stomach, bowels, neck, shoulders, eyes, back or side, often accompanied with difficulty of breathing, sickness at the stomach, chills, fever, diarrhœa, or other premonitory warning, let the patient retire to a sleeping-room, and sweated out of any draft of air, beside the bed, plain his feet above the ankles in water as hot as can possibly be borne, keeping a blanket drawn around the legs to exclude the air, and prevent the escape of the steam. In about five minutes, while the water is still very warm, wipe the feet dry as quickly as possible, and get into a warm bed; then take, if a man, from five to six, or if a woman, from four to five of Brandreth's Pills, (according to the bulk and constitution of the person,) and drink immediately after a tumbler of weak lemonade, if to be procured (or if not, molasses and water,) so hot that it can only be drank a sip at the time. This I have ever found to produce a copious sweat. Then lie down and cover warm, taking care not to expose the person to damp or very cold air for more than an hour and a half after the medicine has operated, and taking nothing but water gruel during that time. If this does not cure within 24 hours, call in a physician, as I have nothing further to offer. Out of perhaps some hundred of cases, I do not, however, recollect a single instance, where this remedy has been applied in the early stages of bilious or inflammatory disease, in which it has not accomplished a speedy and thorough cure. Should any one be induced to test the efficacy of the recipe, I would caution them against omitting to follow its directions minutely in every respect, and that they be particularly careful in procuring Brandreth's Pills that are genuine.

THOMAS R. HAZARD, M. D."

Dr. LULL, of Potsdam, St. Lawrence County, has used Brandreth's Pills in his practice and personally for twenty-six years. He has written a pamphlet of his experience with this medicine, which he says, in the hands of the most ignorant, does more to relieve and cure disease than the most enlightened physicians can do without it.

THE CULTIVATION OF THE CRANBERRY is much more easy and successful in the common dry soil or private gardens, market gardens, or in field culture, than in the usual clumsy way in bogs and meadows. The yield this season, in my method of culture, was over 400 bushels per acre. Explicit directions for cultivation, with price of cranberry plants and all other useful and ornamental trees, plants and shrubs, will be sent by mail. Plants prepaid by mail.

DEAFNESS AND CATARRH CURED.

No. 426 Sixth-av., New-York, Dec. 9, 1863.

I was deaf for several years, and hearing of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I was induced to place myself under his care, and I am now happy to state that my hearing was entirely restored after a short treatment. I was also suffering from chronic catarrh, of which I was also cured by the skillful treatment of Dr. Von Eisenberg. I do but justice to the Doctor in stating that in treating me he displayed that skill and knowledge which have already procured for him such a deserved reputation, and that the principles which direct his system of curing Deafness and Catarrh are such as to render success certain, in my opinion. Many months have passed since Dr. Von Eisenberg restored my hearing, and it continues as good as ever.

CATARRH CURED.
READ!

I have been suffering for a long time from a severe Catarrh, with a continual dullness in my head, a tightness across my chest, a weight over my eyes, which were weak, watery, and very painful. My nostrils were completely obstructed with a pouring fluid. That frequent sneezing, hoarseness of my voice often attended with a fullness of my throat, great pressure, and a continual dropping. Dr. Von Eisenberg has cured me of all these disagreeable sufferings. I may, indeed, say that I feel a new life. The treatment of Dr. Von Eisenberg is so skillful as it is unknown. It is in my opinion impossible to overrate the benefit I have received at his hands. I heartily recommend any one suffering like myself to place themselves under Dr. Von Eisenberg's care, with a certainty of being speedily cured.

HARLEM, July 25, 1863.

I have been deaf for over TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, and Dr. Von EISENBERG operated on both of my ears without the slightest pain, a thing that I could not believe could be done. I now hear well, and feel as I never did for the last twenty years. The dexterity and skill with which the operation was performed evince the highest practical ability. Hear perfectly. It is now over a month since the operation, and I continue to feel as well as ever.

WILLIAM LIDDLE.

No. 128 Allen-st., New-York, Feb. 5, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by almost eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his modes of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his modes of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain.

JOHN TAYLOR.

NEW-YORK, July 28, 1863.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with congealed blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. We with grateful thanks that give this testimony to his skill.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.

READ.

New-York, March 26, 1863.

This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual sorenesses of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flashes, a great lightness of the chest and pain, so much so that every time I thought it would strangulate. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hopes of success. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I deemed sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

"RUBINA

Is the title of a very readable American novel, of more than ordinary excellence, published by James G. Gregory, of New-York. The greater portion of the volume is devoted to a vivid representation of the life, surroundings and characters of a New-England village. Both the description and the characterization have the closeness of fact of personal observation and experience. 'Aunt Rhoda' is particularly good. The contrast between the heroine and the people among whom she is placed, and the intense elements of aspiration and passion blended with the rustic aspects of the life she so shrewdly depicts, add a romantic flavor to the homely substance of the story."—Boston Transcript.

AN INTRODUCTION TO MUNICIPAL LAW.

Designed for General Readers, and for Students in Colleges and Higher Schools.

By
JOHN NORTON POMEROY.

1 vol., 8vo., 624 pages, cloth, $3.

From Amos Dean, Esq., Albany Law School.

I have spent nearly four days in reading your book, and am willingly on my in reference to it. I find it, when considered in reference to its scope and the design had in view in entering upon it, is a work of great merit. The topics are presented clearly, discussed with ability, and in the main, satisfactory results arrived at. Parts I. and II., I think, may prove very useful to students at law and young lawyers. Part III. is a great deal of the history of the law, and especially in its relations, both common and civil, that is very clearly, briefly and logically stated, and more available in the method presented in your work than in any other that I am acquainted with.

From J. H. McIlvaine, D. D., Professor of Political Science in Princeton College, New-Jersey.

I have examined the advance sheets of your work on Municipal Law, and I am happy to say that I regard it as one of great value, not only for the general reader, to whom it will be very interesting and profitable, but also for those who make the law their chosen profession. The chief importance of the work, however, will be found, I think, in its use as a text-book in the higher schools in our colleges; and as such, it is my purpose to introduce it in my department of Political Science in the College of New-Jersey. I may add that it contains a vast amount of information upon the matters of which it treats, which has obtained a new dispensation, and with Having been acquainted with your labors from the beginning, I rejoice that you have brought them to so happy a conclusion.

From the Hon. Wm. B. Wright, one of the Judges of the Court of Appeals of the State of New-York.

The education of the American citizen is incomplete, that does not include in the time-honored principles of the law; and any course of instruction that passes it by as something foreign to the purposes of a liberal education, is essentially defective.

I have been struck with the precision and accuracy, and, in view of the magnitude of the subject, the completeness, of the book.

ANOTHER BRILLIANT CONTRIBUTOR TO
THE NEW-YORK MERCURY.

MISS HARRIET E. PRESCOTT,
AUTHOR OF "AMBER GODS" AND OTHER POPULAR TALES, whose works of fiction have placed her among the first in

THE FRONT RANK
OF
AMERICAN NOVELISTS,

has been engaged to write for the LEADING FAMILY PAPER OF THE COUNTRY, and her initial contribution, entitled will appear in the NEW-YORK MERCURY of March 12, which will be ready everywhere at noon on Monday.

Miss Harriet E. Prescott is the darling of the American historian, William H. Prescott, whose fame is as wide as the circle of civilization, and whose memory is cherished by his countrymen with a feeling of veneration accorded no other author, with the exception, perhaps, of Washington Irving. The daughter, like the father, has the gift of genius, and her stories in the Atlantic Monthly Magazine have added largely to the prestige and popularity of that able periodical, and she imparts to every subject upon which her powerful pen is employed a fascinating interest. To a mind richly stored with varied knowledge, she adds an imagination that is tempered to its slightest, though it never soars into the region of the impossible. Her latest production,

MISS DEVONSHIRE,

written expressly for THE NEW-YORK MERCURY, is founded upon a striking and very popular incident of the war, portraying, with remarkable vivacity and brilliancy, the role played by the Belle Boyds and other spirits of the rebellion, and verifying the old adage that "Love rules the camp, the court, the grove."

RIFLED ORDNANCE.

A practical treatise on the application of the rifle to guns and mortars of every caliber, in which is added a new theory of the initial action and force of fired gunpowder. First American, from the fifth revised British edition. By LYNAL THOMAS, F. R. A. S. In one volume, octavo, with illustrations. Price $3.

"This volume is well got up, illustrated with engravings, diagrams, &c., and will be welcomed by the military profession as an important contribution to the science of gunnery. A discussion on the nature of the action of gunpowder, confined to the work, embraces some interesting suggestions."—New-York Times.

"This is a new and revised edition of a very excellent work published for the use of another service, dream since and now published for the first time in this country. It is a perfectly practical treatise on the subject of rifled ordnance and will be found extremely useful to those who propose to make that science their study. At a time like the present, when all the arts of war are brought into requisition, a work of this kind forms a valuable addition to the practical literature of the times."—Philadelphia Daily News.

"This is a work which should be not only read but studied by all interested in the invention, manufacture and employment of rifled ordnance and elongated projectiles. We think that whoever reads it will profit by it. Mr. Thomas' suggestions as to the manner of conducting experiments are excellent."—The Army and Navy Journal.

A complete edition of Gen. McClellan's Report is now published by Sheldon & Co., of this City, and under Gen. McClellan's own revision. We have already noticed the extraordinary omissions and inaccuracies in the report published by Congress, in the Rebellion Record, and in some other editions. The excuse given for this are, we hear, the reports of Congress, viz.: "That some copies of the files from a compositor's desk, or been mislaid in the Government printing office."

Some have supposed that the importance of these omissions, relating as they do to the very interesting and important period of 1862, was intentional. We cannot believe not; but be this as it may, we are glad to be supplied with a correct and complete copy of one of the most interesting war reports ever submitted to public inspection.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

COMPENSATION OF COUNSEL FOR CAPTORS.

The United States vs. The Steamer Nassau.—This proceeding sp on a question of costs. The vessel was condemned as a prize. The libel was filed and prosecuted in the name of the United States District Attorney. Mr. Upton appeared as counsel for captors in the case under the [illegible] of the Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Sanford appeared as counsel appointed by the [illegible] claiming Bills of costs were taxed and filed in [illegible] Mr. Sanford now claimed to have [illegible] the same class of services charged in bills [illegible] for the same parties [illegible] Mr. Upton. [illegible]

Held by the Court—[illegible] services upon which the [illegible] services charged in this bill [illegible] to withhold its taxation [illegible] the bill of costs [illegible] offered for taxation, [illegible] by the court as a [illegible] charge against the [illegible] and the order to [illegible]

[illegible]

The time occupied in the service was not stated. The District Attorney interposed no objections to the bills either of them. The Court not being satisfied with that mode of determining the amount of compensation, made an order that the Prize Commissioners ascertain and report the fair value of the services. They reported that they had been attended by the parties; that the bills and certain affidavits for the appellees were submitted in evidence, and that no other evidence was offered, and that half the usual Chamber of $500, would be a suitable compensation, but did not state the amount of time occupied in the labor performed.

Held by the Court—That the Court is not satisfied that the rule of estimating such compensation by a percentage on the value of the property, either in law or in fact, or has any recognition or force in law entitling it to be carried into effect, except by virtue of the adoption by the parties affected by it.

That the office, being under exclusive on prize, was for the time being the property of the United States, and not chargeable with the expense consequent upon bonding it by the claimants for their own benefit.

That the compensation charged to not thought to be equitably and reasonably chargeable in that amount upon the fund.

Taxation of these items therefore refused.

PRIZE COMMISSIONERS' COMPENSATION—CONTINUED.

The United States vs. The Steamer Merrimack.—This was also a question of costs. The vessel was brought into this port on the 26th day of July, 1862, and was delivered on the Prize Commissioner, and the libel was filed and the vessel taken by the Marshal under the process of the same day. The vessel and cargo were condemned as prize. The Prize Commissioner charged 10 per cent. upon the value of the vessel and cargo, amounting to $2,[illegible] as custody fees for holding the prize property in his possession for less than thirty days, and until the prize came into the custody of the Marshal.

Held by the Court—That as the true boundary of the fund and law in this case, no custody fee is allowed due to the Commissioner for holding in possession the ship, not to place for the cargo on a merely constructive possession of it.

That in this case the proofs do not show any use of personal charges by the Commissioner of the ex. [illegible] of the vessel and cargo, or any other use by it in agency of a warrant or common employee.

That the custody fee is allowable for person of services of the Commissioner in securing and protecting prize goods, and cannot be granted to mere disbursements to other persons.

That disbursements made by Commissioners in the execution of their official duties are to be provided for under other heads of account than that of fees and personal compensation.

Custody fee therefore disallowed.

PRIZE COMMISSIONERS' COMPENSATION.

The United States vs. The Schooner Stella and Cargo.—This case presented legal questions as to the taxation of the bill of a Prize Commissioner, the after its effort to have disposed of in the case of the Merrimack.

Held by the Court—That the implication to the 11th section of the act of Congress of July 17, 1862, fixing the sum of emoluments allowed to the Commissioner for a year's official service, including the fees, should extend the salary of $2,000 alone, usually [illegible] to the Commissioner.

That the provision of the Act of July 17, 1862, prohibit the allowance of any larger sum to the officer.

That the taxation must be deferred until it be shown to the court that an allowance of custody fees in this suit will be necessary to make up his yearly salary. Then it may be competent to the court to inquire into the fact upon which the charge is claimed.

What is Proper Tender of Money due Employment Boarding-house Keeper's Men on the Baggage of his Boarders.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge McCarthy.

Jacob F. Muller vs. Ferdinand Stendl.—This was an action brought by plaintiff against defendant, who is an eminent boarding-house keeper, for the value of a trunk left with defendant by plaintiff. Plaintiff owed a bill for board of $6, and as alleges the trunk with its contents, worth $150, was retained as security. Plaintiff attempted to recover a tender of the money and demand of the property. The evidence showed that he went to the defendant's house with the money, placed it on the bar, keeping the hand over it, and said, "Here is the money, but you must not touch it unless you give me my trunk." Defendant's counsel contended that this was not a proper tender, as it was accompanied by language tantamount to a threat. Also that an eminent boarding-house keeper had the same lien as an innkeeper on the baggage of his guests. The cases were cited and considered in both points, and on the first one granted a motion to dismiss the complaint.

Mr. Anderson for plaintiff; Ex-Recorder Smith for defendant.

IS JEAN INGELOW A POET?

"It is not easy to answer, what is a Poet? but it is very easy to know, by the rolling deep down in the heart, when you are reading poetry. That is the answer which will be made to the question whether Jean Ingelow is a poet."—Geo. Wm. Curtis, in Harper's Monthly.

THE HIGH TIDE,
BY JEAN INGELOW.

The Round Table copies the whole of this remarkable poem, and devotes four columns to a critical analysis of the same, as "evincing poetical genius of no common order."

Our most distinguished authors are not behindhand in acknowledging its superior excellence. John G. Whittier says—"She has written the best ballad of modern time in her 'High Tide on the Coast of Lincolnshire.'" Bayard Taylor says—"I consider 'HIGH TIDE' One of the finest ballads in the language." O. W. Holmes says—"It is a darling poem—of England, yet of everywhere. I cannot keep it out of my mind, and it haunts me if my head." Miss Harriet E. Prescott says—"I can nowhere recall lovelier or more touching verses than those of the 'High Tide,' which thrill with pathos and music."

And what is said in praise of this poem will apply with equal justice to the whole book.

"But there is nothing in the volume which does not betray the hand of a true poet. The poems exhibit a rare maturity of thought, great richness and sweetness of versification, and almost entire freedom from echoes of other singers."—Richard Taylor.

"Miss Ingelow being a poet, is for us not less than for England. She has won for herself a home and dominion wherever the English language is spoken."—Charles Eliot Norton.

"A bed of English cowslips, with the May-dew on them, is not fresher than her verses."—O. W. Holmes.

"The poems of this gifted lady have given me singular pleasure, still increasing in several cases, on a second or third perusal."—Whittier, Hawthorne.

"She has gained justly the right to sing among the poets; nor does she take a lowly place among them even now."—Charles Hale.

MEET FOR HEAVEN.
Third American from the Twenty-third English Edition.
From the Boston Post.

The author of this volume writes very well. There is a Samolian grace and purity of Christian feeling and sentiment in these pages. It is a book that ought to find its way into every Christian family—for, being once carefully read, it will be lovingly read, and will exalt and purify the mind. The work cannot but commend itself to such books written and read, and did our clergy study them more, and by their aid seek to allay the fierce spirit of the time, some might be a happier people. It is not orthodox abstraction or cloister speculation that fills these pages; it is good, healthy, practical Christian sentiment.

PARTON'S GEN. BUTLER AT NEW-ORLEANS continues its extraordinary sale, having already reached its twelfth edition. The first review of this work in the English press, just at hand, appears in the London Spectator. It is long and very favorable, concluding with the following paragraph:

"This biography leaves on our minds no doubt that the Union possesses in Gen. Butler a man of rare and original capacity, extraordinarily fitted for constructive administration, and without any tendency to cruelty, though with that indifference to the feelings of others so often marked in very strong men. Of all the men we fill our European history, the one he is most like—strangely like—is Frederick the Great."—London Spectator. Price, $2. Published by

PHŒNIX BANK, NEW-YORK, 4th March, 1864.

AT AN ADJOURNED MEETING OF THE ... Board of Directors of the Phœnix Bank, held this day, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased God, in His infinite wisdom, to remove thus suddenly, from our midst our so highly esteemed friend, the President of this institution, Thomas Tileston, Esq., and

Whereas, Mr. Tileston was for nearly half a century an eminent merchant of this City, and for more than twenty years the President of this institution, and throughout his whole career—whether as a citizen, in his relations to the community, or in the walks of business, or in the discharge of the various and important duties confided to his care—was distinguished alike for his unwilting energy, his thorough usefulness, his great capacity, and his complete integrity;

Resolved, That we, who for many years were intimately associated with him in this Board, record our respect for his memory and our testimony to his worth, deeply deploring the death of Mr. Tileston as the loss of an able and excellent man, who, in the discharge of his several duties, by his bright exemplars of manner, great originality and kindness, has won the esteem and friendship of all by whom he was surrounded.

Resolved, That sincerely sympathizing in the great affliction which has bereaved our venerable friend of his family, we offer to them this expression of our heartfelt sorrow for the irreparable loss which in his death they are called upon to sustain.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, signed by all the officers of the Bank, be conveyed to the family of our late President.

GEN. SHERMAN'S EXPEDITION.

RUMORS AND CONTRADICTORY REPORTS.

OFFICIAL ADVICES TO FEB. 11.

OUR FORCES THEN AT MERIDIAN

The Rebels Weak in Numbers and Much Demoralized.

Is the Expedition Back to Vicksburgh?

REPORTS FROM CAIRO.

CAIRO, Friday, March 4.

An officer arrived here to-day from Vicksburgh, that city, bearing dispatches from Gen. Sherman. When twelve miles east of Meridian, on the 11th, he says the enemy numbered only 7,000 or 8,000, and were much demoralized. No fighting had occurred after passing Jackson, Miss.

Gen. Sherman had sent a force to Meridian at that time.

When Gen. Sherman was at a point twelve miles west of Meridian, on the 9th ult., he sent part of his forces to Selma, and not back to Meridian, as reported. Last night's dispatches, from which this information is derived, bringe official news which settles the question as to Gen. Sherman's occupation of Selma. The railroad between Jackson and Meridian has been totally destroyed.

The latest advices are that part of Sherman's forces are still at Selma, and the remainder have fallen back to Meridian.

A dispatch from Cairo of the 2d states that when the steamer Mississippi, on her way up, arrived at Vicksburgh, a gentleman, formerly Captain of the steamboat Scotland, just came in from Mobile, having escaped from the rebels, into whose army he had been conscripted, reported that when he left Mobile Gen. Sherman was within forty miles of that place, and could easily take it if he wanted to.

The latest advices of the 16th give no later news than is already published.

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON.

A special to the Philadelphia Bulletin, from Washington the 4th, says intelligence has been received here that Gen. Sherman is back from his extended reconnoissance. He did not go after Selma, and never intended such a thing.

SMITH'S CAVALRY EXPEDITION.

Interesting Account of his Operations—His Return to Memphis.

From the Cairo News, March 1.

Some particulars of the late expedition of Gen. W. L. Smith, lately returned to Memphis, have already been published. Gen. Smith, in person, arrived here last evening. His official report to the military authorities will undoubtedly set forth the following facts:

The expedition moved from Memphis on Thursday, the 11th inst., some 7,000 strong, Brig.-Gen. Wm. L. Smith in command, the purpose being to clear the country of straggling rebel forces, and, if possible, create a diversion in favor of Gen. Sherman, with whom rest it was thought the cavalry expedition might, in due season, communicate. It was stated that the enemy were posted in force beyond the Tallahatchie, and that they would strenuously resist the Federal advance. After two days' heavy marching the expedition reached the Tallahatchie. A brigade of infantry temporarily attached to the expedition, under command of Col. McMillen, was sent forward, and threatened Panola, and afterward to Wyatt for a similar purpose. The movement was successful. The infantry attracted their attention and the forces of the enemy to those points, when Gen. Smith swung his cavalry around to New-Albany, where he crossed without firing a shot. He then pushed boldly forward to a point near the Pontotoc, in the vicinity of Houston, where an encountered some Rebel Confederate troops under Gentzon, numbering near 600. They stampeded at his approach, throwing away their arms as they ran. Gen. Smith pursued only until he reached Houlka swamps, where he found the enemy concentrated in heavy force, holding a cordoroy road, the only pass across the swamp. He could not be turned either to the right or left. In Sumner's whole force was moved rapidly to the front and while a heavy demonstration was made on the front, as though he intended to force a passage over the road. The enemy were again deceived and our force fell back upon Okolona. This was on Monday the 15th inst. The attack on Okolona was as little expected that several Confederate officers, at home on visits to their families, were captured. The Ninth Illinois Regiment of Cavalry, Lieut.-Col. Bergen commanding, was then sent out to Aberdeen to endeavor to secure a crossing of Tombigbee. On the next morning Harrison's Brigade, commanded by Gen. Grierson in person, was sent out to support the Ninth Regiment at Aberdeen, and received directions to threaten Columbus strongly. With the remaining two brigades Gen. Smith swept down the road toward West Point, tearing up the railroad completely as he advanced, and also burning all the corn he found. There were vast quantities of this, scribed and ready for transportation. The amount destroyed could not be much less than two million bushels, and was probably much greater. Two thousand bales of cotton were also devoted to the flames. During this portion of the march, negroes flocked to Gen. Smith by hundreds and thousands, with their household effects, loaded upon horses and mules, with bridles and saddles of the most primitive description. Two incidents of Gen. Smith are delightful. DR. HARTLEY,

NO. 402 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

The only acknowledged Aurist in the United States, who generously offers to attend all persons suffering from affections of the ear, free of charge, until cured, thus proving his success unequaled, and protecting the deaf from being swindled by paying any quack aurists exorbitant fees in advance, and the infliction of yet more serious evils by permitting the application of dangerous remedies by inexperienced and unskilful hands.

Deafness, Noises in the Head, and all disagreeable Discharges from the Ear, speedily and permanently removed, without causing the least pain or inconvenience. A cure in all cases guaranteed, where malformation does not exist.

Thirteen years close and undivided attention to this branch of special practice, has enabled him to render his treatment so much easier and more successful than formerly, confirmed and obstinate cases yield by a steady attention to the means prescribed.

RAVENSWOOD, Aug. 4, 1863.

DR. HARTLEY—Dear Sir: I entered your office for mere consultation, as my father is totally deafened in one ear, of twelve months' standing, and in the other of a month, both coming on suddenly, and impregnable to appliances of external blistering and internal washings and oilings—could, nevertheless, be cured. You examined them, and asked me to be seated for the solution.

The actual hearing followed the question of the searcher in no short a space, and so kindly done withal, that I have just left your office a new man, filled with surprise, gratitude and awe. To me you explained the cause and process on natural principles. I cannot resist the temptation to spread your fame among the afflicted, that they may find the same joy of relief. I want to go in deaf and dismissed.—I remain, very respectfully,

I am, very respectfully and gratefully,

Your obedient servant,

IODINE.

IODINE WATER:

A SOLUTION OF PURE IODINE IN PURE WATER.

PREPARED ONLY BY

DR. H. ANDERS & CO.,

Physicians and Chemists,

94 & 96 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

IT ACTS UPON THE HEART,

LIVER, KIDNEYS,

DIGESTIVE ORGANS, AND GLANDULAR SYSTEM.

The unparalleled success in private practice and the indorsement of

HIGH MEDICAL AUTHORITY,

enable us to recommend

IODINE WATER

for the cure of Scrofula in all forms, Consumption, Cancer, Bronchitis, Heart, Liver and Kidney Diseases; Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervous Affections, Female Weaknesses, Dyspepsia, Syphilis, Mercurial Disease, etc.

AS A TONIC,

its operation is evinced by strengthening the digestive organs and exciting the appetite. In cases of Dyspepsia, Emaciation and Debility, an increased nutrition of the body is the result of the employment of Iodine Water. The patient recovers flesh, strength and color; hitherto pale, relaxed and feeble, he becomes full, strong and florid.

Iodine Water is put up with full directions around each bottle, that it may be used as a family medicine as well as by the practitioner.

Physicians may rely upon the uniform strength of this solution, as containing ¼ grains of Iodine in each fluid ounce pure water—no solvent being used. Its not liable to decomposition nor spontaneously formed iodoform; neither is the Iodine neutralized by combination with any ingredient, and as no unpleasant or injurious results can arise from its continued use, this solution will be found superior to any other method in which Iodine can be exhibited.

The great success which has attended the use of Iodine Water in our own practice, and in the hands of those who have used it, enables us to recommend it to the practitioner and the public as a superior remedy for the cure of Chronic diseases, which have resisted other treatment, feeling confident that with a fair trial it will attest its own excellence.

The genuineness of this solution and its excellence as a medicine are attested by the names of such distinguished men as Dr. Jas. R. Chilton, Professor R. H. Parker, Professor Jas. C. Booth, Dr. S. Whitney, Dr. H. Klingstein, and others.

Price $1 per bottle, 65 per half dozen. Sold by Druggists generally.

TESTIMONIALS.

The Bible Examiner for August, 1863, edited by the Rev. George Storrs, contains the following editorial notice:

"IODINE WATER.—In this number of our magazine we introduce to the attention of our readers this medical preparation. We have done so, not for pay, nor because our pages are used as a medium for advertisements—for we have uniformly declined such—but fidelity to God, and a sense of obligation to Dr. Anders & Co. have made us insert the following:

My only son, George F. Storrs, now 27 years old, has been afflicted, for some dozen years, more or less, with painful swellings and inflammations in various parts of his body; sometimes, (seemingly,) he was near to death; then a respite for a season, but only for a return of the disease with more violence. For the past three years he has had an open sore on his breast; and latterly one near his collar bone, with ulceration in his throat, that was painfully lacerating, and threatening apparently inevitable. In this condition he applied to Dr. Anders & Co. By the use of the Iodine Water the ulceration in his throat disappeared in a short time. Continuing its use, in less than two months he was apparently healed, and his general health much improved. This son, whom I had good reason fully to believe would die before this Summer should close, is now, apparently, in a fair way to recover as perfect health as is common to our mortal state, in gratitude to God, who has thus answered prayer, and in justice to Dr. Anders & Co., I have made this statement, satisfied that there is virtue in the Iodine Water treatment which the readers of this magazine will thank its editor for bringing to their notice.

THE GREAT AMERICAN REMEDIES KNOWN AS

HELMBOLD'S GENUINE PREPARATIONS,

"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"

COMPOUND

FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU,

a positive and Specific Remedy for Diseases of the BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL and DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This medicine increases the power of digestion and excites the absorbents into healthy action, by which the water or calcerous depositions, and all unnatural enlargements, are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for Men, Women, or Children.

H

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

For weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion or Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:

Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of Power, Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing, Weak Nerves, Trembling, Horror of Disease, Wakefulness, Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back, Hot Hands, Flushings of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face, Universal Lassitude of the Pallid Countenance, Muscular System.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, more follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS.

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say they are not frequently followed by those "dreadful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION!

Many are so aware of the early stages of insanity, but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED BY ORGANIC WEAKNESS

requires the aid of a medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

E

FEMALES! FEMALES! FEMALES!

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE,

in many affections peculiar to woman, the Extract Buchu is unequaled by any other remedy, be it Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularities, Falsifications, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulceration or Stricture state of the Uterus, Leucorrhea or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

L

Take no Balsam, Mercury or Unpleasant Medicines for supposed and Dangerous Disease.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

CURES SECRET DISEASES

in all their stages, at little Expense; little or no change of Diet; no Inconvenience. AND NO EXPOSURE.

It causes frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thus removing the irritating, burning and caring sensations of the urethra, allaying pain and inflammation so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling POISONOUS DISEASED AND WORN-OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon thousands, who have been the

and who have had HEAVY FEES to be spent in a short time, have found their cases detected, and that the "Potent" had, by the use of "powerful astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and

PERHAPS, AFTER MARRIAGE.

M

USE HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

For all affections and diseases of the Urinary Organs, whether existing

IN MALE OR FEMALE.

From whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing. Diseases of these Organs require the aid of a Diuretic.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

IS THE GREAT DIURETIC,

AND IT IS CERTAIN

TO HAVE THE

DESIRED EFFECT

IN ALL DISEASES

FOR WHICH

IT IS RECOMMENDED.

B

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!

HELMBOLD'S

COMPOUND

SYPHILIS.

This is an affection of the blood, and attacks the various organs. Swings of the nose, throat, throat, ulcerations and other serious surfaces, making its appearance in the form of blotches, Helmbold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and removes all scaly eruptions of the skin, giving to the complexion a clear and healthy color; and being prepared expressly for this class of complaints, its blood-purifying properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of sarsaparilla.

O

HELMBOLD'S ROSE WASH,

No. 11 Nassau-st., New-York.
The Chicago and Great Eastern Railway Company now offer for sale one million one hundred thousand dollars of their first mortgage bonds, in sums of one thousand dollars each, maturing in thirty years, bearing interest at the rate of Seven per cent. per annum, payable in the City of New-York, on the first days of April and October, in each year.
These bonds are secured by a first and only Mortgage on the property, income and franchises of the Railway Company, executed to Frederick Schuchardt and Henry Morgan, of the City of New-York, Trustees.
The remaining nine hundred thousand dollars of the Bonds are set apart and remain in the hands of the said Trustees, for the purpose of being exchanged for the indebtedness of the Chicago and Cincinnati Railroad Company, running from La Crosse to Logansport; this effected, the $2,000,000 will form a fully and only mortgage on a line of road 110 miles in length, extending from Chicago to Logansport, where it connects with the Cincinnati and Chicago Air-line Railroad, forming the shortest line by 40 miles, between Chicago and Cincinnati, and by 38 miles the shortest line between Louisville and Chicago.
It will also open, in connection with roads now in operation, entirely new and very direct lines from Chicago to New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and all Eastern cities.
